EDITORIAL

Thank you very much for joining us on another thought provoking expedition to the limits of knowledge (I did really need to say that!). It has been an interesting Christmas for me certainly - I was present at an unusual happening a few days before the new year. I was staying at a friends house and just getting ready to settle down for sleep when the power failed. I shouted to my female friend who was in the other room that I thought we had power cut. Just as I finished saying this, there was an extra bright flash which lit up the room through the thin bedroom curtains. Then from in the other room, Carol (the friend) shouted "Get in here quick, quick, get in here right now!". Not quite knowing what to expect, and in a half awake state, as a defensive measure grabbed the nearest thing to myself, and ran into the lounge of the upstairs flat. By the time I was just coming out of the bedroom the power had come back on.

Carol explained that she had just seen a very bright and large object which appeared to have a flame, thrust or halo coming out of the back of it. This had streaked across the Abercynon valley and towards the North. It must have passed directly overhead. Carol was quite shook up by this and informed me of a message she had been given by a psychic, which stated that there "would sightings whilst the snow was around." Well we were in the middle of the big freeze and the snow was around, so this extra information made the experience more interesting for Carol. Needless to say we got out in the car and did some nightwatching straight away, but sadly we saw nothing else. I hope your Christmases were as eventful as that. Oh yes, and Carol asked me why was I tightly clutching the duvet from the bed!

In this edition we will be looking at the phenomena of Remote Viewing which has hit the headlines since the Jim Schnabel (formerly a skeptic, but now we just don't know...) documentary called "The Real X Files: Remote Viewers". The obvious need for further information led me to dig out some facts about the subject, as well as doing some interviews, which I am sure you will find interesting. After reading the articles, which as always come from all possible angles, you may be inclined to try some Remote Viewing yourself. Good luck. One thing, be sure to let us know of your results - especially the good ones! I am sure there will be more information on Remote Viewing in future issues.

I have been holding back on doing an article on the Waco "siege" for some time. The reason for this is due to the want to let the full scope and soul horror sink in to me before setting pen to paper. The information which I present to you will probably shock, and it should for the facts behind Waco have been very much misrepresented in the media. We should know the truth so we can be aware that these sorts of cover-ups can happen in the UK, perhaps tomorrow! I strongly recommend the reader getting hold of a copy of the video Waco the big lie as this serves to back up the articles points very well.

My good friend Chris Fowler has been hard at work hacking away at the Ministry of Defence in London and has received an exclusive first time admission that Rudloe Manor was indeed the co-ordination point for UFO reports investigation in the UK. You will probably read about this amazing admission elsewhere soon, but don't forget that you heard it here first folks! (Read Newsdesk for further information)

Chris Davies, one of the founder members to the "Search" UFO group from Bristol has written an article on the misperceptions of the Bible and characters. It is interesting that such a powerful thing as religion can base it's roots in Bible stories which are more far removed and less credible than current day UFO sighting reports. Yet believers take the messages contained in the Bible as "Gospel" with little evidence to back up these stories. It is strange that it is so hard to make some of these same people believe in UFO's, other life etc... How weeeeird!

Chris Fowler again takes the stage and provides us with an interesting review of happenings in the Gulf Breeze area of Florida (his special interest area). Much of the information and evidence being collected in this area is having an active effect on the Ufology world. Daylight craft with radical manoeuvring capabilities are now caught on film on atleast a monthly basis. We are fast approaching a new era of understanding of the potential of the phenomena and Chris will keep us abreast of the latest happenings as they take place.

Paul Damon signs on with another interesting viewpoint on the Roswell Footage along with Daryl Smith, an independent UFO researcher from Bath. Paul also shares his opinions on the expansion of awareness of other planets and possibilities for life that surround us in the article "Towards the Hollow Earth".

Lastly we have the concluding part of our introduction to Crop Circles interviews. This time we hear the intriguing stories and unearthed facts that have been brought forth by the researcher Busty Taylor. Busty, in addition to being one of the most recognised crop circle photographers, has been researching the subject for many years. Hopefully his insights will inspire others to look at this interesting subject and delve deeper.

Hope you enjoy this edition and once more may I welcome anyone to submit articles or letters for publications or to write to us with research information. We are nothing without all of you out there, and together I am sure we will get closer to the truth. Keep in touch.

NEWSDESK Update

NEWS EXCLUSIVE. MOD ADMIT RUDLOE MANOR DID DEAL WITH UFO'S.

Truthseekers review author Chris Fowler recently made a breakthrough in his dealings with the MOD (Ministry of Defence) at Whitehall. Chris regularly writes to the MOD questioning them on their policies in a very methodical manner. It is hard to evade the types of questions that Chris asks.

In his most recent reply from the MOD Miss Kerry Phillpot of Secretariat Air Staff 2a (The section that deals with UFO reports) admitted for the very first time that Rudloe Manor did undertake the role of a "co-ordination point" for reports of UFO's. Chris has already been in touch with famous UFO author Tim Good and he was very excited by the news. This admission has been a long time coming and goes quite a way to confirm some of the good investigative work that Tim Good has undertaken as well as Mr Fowler. This is certainly a very interesting story which will undoubtedly have ramifications that shake further up the MOD and UFO trees. We will now be able to ask the question - who deals with this sort of thing now... As the MOD have admitted that it was eat with by Rudloe in the past, it will be very hard to say that it is no longer being dealt with. We will keep you informed of any other updates on this story.

RAF SCRAMBLE JETS FOR UFO CHASE

Three RAF jets were scrambled to intercept a UFO that was buzzing Edinburgh, a pilot claimed. The tornado aircraft were sent up to investigate after the UFO was picked up on ground radar and was also reported having been seen by ground staff. The flier, who fears he may lose his licence if he were identified, said that the incident was again confirmed to him by a flight control officer at RAF Kinloss a few weeks later. The pilot claimed that the people involved have all been ordered to shut up about the case.

The pilot who works on postal aircraft said he heard the events being discussed over air to ground radio as he was on an approach to land. The RAF deny having scrambled any aircraft to chase the UFO but one insider at Edinburgh airport said that he remembered the incident well.

BRECON BEACONS UFO

Recently a UFO was spotted over a military range. The Sennybridge range plays home to many practising troops including the SAS. The ranges are normally accessible by road as long as there is no firing taking place but on the night in question the site was active. Ceri Jones, and a few friends were up on an overlooking hill off the ranges at about 11.00 at night when they saw a large light, between orange and yellow in colour lit up. The object seemed to be being fired at by laser weapons of some sort. The sighting was videotaped but the laser weapons cannot be seen because of focus problems with the video camera lens. We are investigating this case now and welcome any information regarding UFO's in the Brecon area or the possible Brecon military involvement.

NEW PLANET MAKES ALIEN ODDS BETTER

The recent discovery of a planet only 35 light years away from Earth which could support life as we know it has got scientists looking hard at their opinions about alien life in the universe. The planet, which was discovered by the Hubble telescope has a blue green appearance and all signs are that there is an Oxygen atmosphere, seas and land masses. The solar system and planet are located near the Pegasus star system.

Experts have estimated that the planet is a lot hotter than ours but are not ruling out that life could not evolve in such conditions. The revelation means now that the odds of no alien life being able to visit us are reduced. It is also possible that other nearer planets may be found which would increase the possibility of us finding evidence of alien life somewhere in space.

ROSWELL 2 ON THE CARDS

It has been rumoured that Ray Santilli, executive producer of the Roswell footage and original purchaser of the footage, will be releasing part 2 of the footage soon. Word of this has the UFO community buzzing - but some people are not so amused. Ray Santilli has made various promises to the UFO world which involve access to the footage, all of which he has welched on. He claimed that he no longer had access to the footage as it had been sold to a German business man who collects rare films. This was supposed to be the last we would then hear from Ray on the subject. It did not matter to Ray that he had promise that he would not sell the footage!

Now it seems that the German backer has come back to Mr Santilli in order to allow further parts of the footage out to the public - for a profit of course. Ray neglected to tell the world that he was not giving the whole portion of the footage, instead he chose to give the impression that they got all that was available. Now we are told that much more footage exists and will be released soon. Some ufologists say that this exploitation of researchers and public is outrageous and that Ray Santilli has had the opportunity to make enough money out of the footage to allow him to become a bit more generous.

TOWARDS THE HOLLOW MOUNTAIN

By Paul Damon

Paul Damon hits out with facts and logic at all the closed minded...

It is estimated that our sun is 5,000 million years old and it is also estimated that our Milky Way galaxy is somewhere between 10,000 and 25,000 million years old. It is certainly not unreasonable to make the assumption that there must be other star systems numbering in the millions that are older than our own. Lets imagine for a moment that way over on the other side of our galaxy, somewhere in the middle of the eastern spiral arm, there is a sun that is

STELLAR SCENARIOS

Such stellar scenarios and resulting questions could be applied to a staggering amount of stars in our galaxy, and then maybe an infinite amount of stars within all of the galaxies of the cosmos.

Lets look at this in another, equally as mind stimulating-way. How do we, the human race perceive plankton in the sea? How do the plankton in the sea perceive us? We have only discovered plankton in the last century due to the power of microscope technology, and before that, knowledge to do so? Yet they could be watching us very closely - as a marine biologist would study the behaviour of plankton.

BEWILDERMENT

Is there no perception of an alien intelligence? Well, if you asked the average man or woman on the street that question you would more than likely be met with frowns and blank stares of bewilderment. The general answers would most certainly be along the lines of "I've never really

Towards The Hollow Mountain Art by Paul Damon 1995

5,500 million years old - 500 million years older than our own sun. Let us also imagine that among the planets that formed within the gravity area of that sun, a planet orbited at roughly the same distance as the Earth orbits our star. Life evolved on that world, and the dominant species evolved into intelligent creatures capable of harnessing their environment - and they left their stone age 500 million years before we did. Given such a scenario, if they survived to the present day, what would be the state of their technology, their understanding of the universe and the physics that powers it? What would be the state of their biological evolution? Would the power of their minds be capable of differing psychic abilities, maybe enhanced by their technology? Would they have cracked the secret of genetic coding in order to achieve cellular immortality? And maybe the biggest question, would they have the capability to travel from one side of the galaxy to the other in a very short time?

we had no perception of plankton at all; a life form occupying the oceans of our world for millions of years. We believe them to have no intelligence, based on biological assumptions. The bias of organic sizes also comes into play here. Now, if we flip the coin and ask if plankton perceives mankind then we will inevitably say "of course not....". That again is a biological assumption. No person can prove otherwise. Is it safe to say that we do not on the whole enjoy an interactive role with the life of plankton - and again, vice-versa. If we look at the bigger picture of the food chain and eco system, then we can see that all life on this planet is intricately bound together and linked in some way or another. Although both perceptions have no real relevance, the bond is present. Can the same be said of stellar and galactic neighbours? Are we, as a species, oblivious of the fact that alien lifeforms could be swarming the galaxy, and we are not perceiving them as we do not have the experience or technological thought about it to be honest..." or "What are you talking about?" A very unfortunate fact is that when you make the decision to investigate and research what is sometimes labelled a fringe phenomena, you will more than likely invoke undesirable responses from friends and family alike - unless they think and feel along the same lines as you. When you decide to tell a startling piece of information to someone who has only ever had a lifelong interest in football, television and the sports club on a Friday night, you will inevitably get a good humoured slap on the back and an invitation for a drink in the closest pub.

In retrospect, if you get the same person on their own and in a sober mood - and pull out a photograph of the Martian face and show them it for example, and simply say to the person "What do you think that looks like?", you will notice that they will stare intensely at it for a few moments, and give the answer - "a face...". If you then say -

Remote Viewing & The Military

By Non-commissioned Officer Matthew Williams

When the American military starts using psychics for its intelligence gathering the whole world takes notice. Were the claims of the remote viewers with substance or were they taking part in a counter intelligence program to double bluff the Russians?

Remote Viewing may best be described as a clinical and scientific way of obtaining moderately accurate and repeatable instances of extra sensory perception. (ESP) Remote Viewing is the indirect method of obtaining the information from the remote viewer by use of "double blind" (keeping hidden from all involved) questioning. This asks why, if nobody knows what the questions are, can people give the answers. This is the beauty of Remote Viewing because results are indeed obtained. All that it seems is required is strict training in the techniques involved.

I have for quite some time been very interested in claims of psychics and have been looking for hard proof, if any. The answers always seem to be out of reach for me. It's almost as if the subject eludes me, which can lead to a sense of paranoia about the people who surround you telling you the truth of their precognitive abilities and asks the question, is one being duped? I was very interested when I heard about Remote Viewing because it seemingly had a seal of approval from the American government. How fantastic, that whilst official sources would always deny the abilities of psychics and debunk claims of paranormal phenomena, that we should see that the same official sources were investigating and using such paranormal abilities for clandestine means.

The existence of Remote Viewing has long been known, although not largely acknowledged by those in higher positions of power. Due to the large number of people who have now come forward, apparently with the consent of their old employers, the weight of evidence to say that such projects did exist has forced the issue out into the open.

In 1927 there were a series of experiments carried out by two ladies named Miles and Ramsden which demonstrated the ability to remote view. In this case photographs were taken of distant locations and then sealed in envelopes. The subject viewer would then have the mental image of the church projected to them by another person. The viewer would not be seeing what was hidden inside the envelopes but instead would transpose themselves to the remote location where the photo was taken - and the time could vary for when the person views the area. Some promising results were obtained and this may have led to interest being taken up by the British military. Britain seems to be the first country to have used psychics for spying purposes. Information regarding these projects is hard to obtain although certain pieces of information have come forth. It was not until the 1970's that America started its R.V. projects.

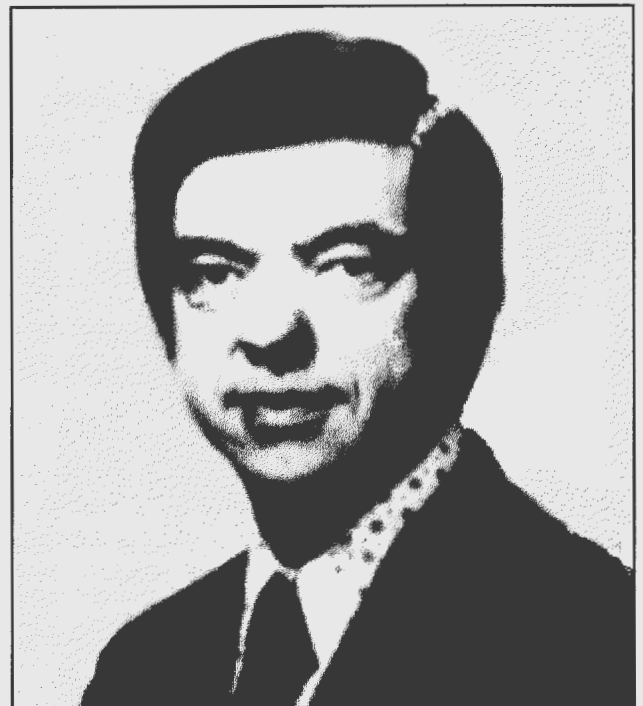

The Stanford Research Institute (S.R.I.) based in California was the site chosen by the C.I.A. to conduct secretive experiments into R.V. capabilities.

Two well respected scientists, Russell Targ and Harold Puthoff (pictured to the right) were the first people to get involved in research work. They used various photographs which were sealed in envelopes and put in a safe. Somebody who did not know the contents of the envelopes would be allowed to open one of them and then make their way to the location where the photo was taken. Whilst the person was on his way the remote viewer/s who were separated in another building would follow using E.S.P. and describe their final location. Some of the results were startling, and soon the team began to use different methods of targeting.

It was discovered that it was not required for the person who had the envelope to attend the location in order to get results. Subsequently it was then found that the random selected sealed envelope could be left sealed, but given a number, and this could be quoted as the reference for the remote viewer to lock onto. Remarkable as it may seem this method showed to be just as effective - so no projection of location was required any longer. The final breakthrough was that map references could be used, even if these were from non standard maps with generalised accuracy. It was as if the people doing the remote viewing would already know where they were supposed to be, without being asked. They could view there without being prompted and provide answers without knowing the question; although they still required a mechanism and regimen in order to provide reasonable results.

This indicated that in addition to there being an ability for somebody to remote

Dr Harold Puthoff

Mr Ingo Swann

view, they were also using or making contact with a secondary paranormal ability to foresee the future or gain intelligence through an unknown means. Some people believe that this is proof of a link with what has been known as the Akashic record. This Akashic record is supposedly a database of all that is now, and all that has been, linked with those that live and think, and those that have lived and interfacing somewhere with a higher energy.]

Targ and Puthoff employed many psychics in their tests but the best known of them were Pat Price and Ingo Swann. Pat Price was a retired police commissioner, whilst Ingo Swann was an artist. They took part in many experiments and helped form the basic routines which ended up being employed in all remote viewing tests carried out by the military later on. Price's and Swann's results in tests showed their accuracy as being an average 80%, which considering the popular view of sceptics who say such things are impossible, is a very good score.

Ingo Swann developed a system where

For many years the Russians have been experimenting into remote viewing techniques as well as psycho-kinetic abilities. It is felt by many that they have made the lead in the race for understanding our hidden abilities. Whilst America perfected its physical deterrents it appears that the Soviets were tuning their mental powers and perfecting mind control weapons to affect the psyche of the western world. These weapons have been in use since the 1970's and some can be detected on the short-wave band of radio such as the famous "Woodpecker". It has been stated by some intelligence sources that the third world war would be fought by the power of the mind and that if it started then the Russians probably would win!

he would keep the remote viewer on their toes by a constant re-evaluation of what was being seen by different perspectives known as "Series" and "Levels".

Series involved the description of the senses and levels could involve a persons feelings and emotions about a situation. Sometimes the person would not be able to describe objects or locations but could guess the shapes or without seeing the shape have an impression or feeling that it would be that shape, and this would be a level response. Deeper levels would require the subject to feel himself being at the location as opposed to his simply observing it. This would then allow "walk-throughs", where the person could explore the environment once he had locked on using the lesser levels. Through repeated and quick fire examinations of the series and level responses the details are noted.

Sometimes the viewer would prefer to take the notes himself or to do drawings of locations whilst relaying descriptions verbally. The reason the questions were supposed to be quick fire was to stop the viewer trying to analyse what he or she was seeing and categorising it i.e: The person sees a square shape and given too much time may fool himself into thinking it is something like a window pane when it may have been a house. Sometimes when in deep levels the remote viewing was so vivid that no interpretations were needed.

One interesting part of the remote viewing process was the effect called displacement. This came to mean two things, either that the viewer did not see what they were supposed to or that whilst viewing one thing they went off track to another valid but unrequired location. One example which helps show that there may be an ability to connect to a Akashic record was the fact that although a remote viewer had been targeted to the selected envelope in front of him - he would end up at the location of the other envelopes which were still in the safe - or even envelopes which were not used from experiments from weeks earlier. In a test environment this would obviously mean that the remote viewer had failed to complete his task but cannot be ignored. The viewer has still demonstrated an ability. Sometimes a viewer could be asked to remote view a location and feel drawn to something which was of greater importance - such as an item of political or military importance, but without quite knowing why.

There was an interesting side effect of repeated remote viewing which was reported from people who trained to view. They said that as they got better at the remote viewing they could trigger themselves to remote view at almost any time they wanted. Some even reported remote viewing when they didn't want to, but in a safe manner - they never crashed the cars they were driving whilst their minds wandered!

When the C.I.A. eventually saw the results which were being obtained they extended the project to new lengths and employed the viewers in the tasks of gathering intelligence for them and training new viewers. Many of the details of the C.I.A.'s activities in this area are still classified and cannot be accessed for some time. The viewers who were involved such as Ed Dames and Ingo Swann, to name a few, will not speak of the classified parts of their work but quite often hint at what was involved.

What appears to have taken place in the classified parts of the research is that compartmentalised teams of remote viewers were set up who worked on separate projects and were not allowed to know about the existence of the other projects. Swann indicated that it was possible that many other units may have been created and still be in existence after he had left the project. As the period of time some people were involved in the projects seems to be around 1975 - 1985 we can imagine that the projects were seen as worthy and credible and so would not have been disbanded due to failing results. If this were to be the case surely it could have been concluded that remote viewing was useless in less than 10 years regardless of the time delays in most compartmentalised bureaucracy.

It is interesting that whilst the Targ and Puthoff initial experiments took place the talk on the street was of remarkable results, but once the C.I.A. took over properly then a team of sceptical researchers came in to test the results of the experiments. They concluded that there was very little worth in the experiments and chose to put a lot of the "displacement" results in the category of no-score. Token resistance was offered to this by Targ and Puthoff, which may indicate that Targ and Puthoff were taking part in a disinformation campaign against the public knowledge of the experiments. One claim of a group of sceptics was "It appears that the remote viewing effect is at present nothing more than a massive artefact of poor methodology and wishful thinking", in 1980 when at the time the massive military program was still alive and well! Remote viewers were used by the military in the search for Saddam Hussian in the Gulf War and as we understand are still used today.

Note also it is often seen that new innovations are quickly hidden and claimed to be worthless - which is sometimes a good indicator of clandestine military interest in similar things.

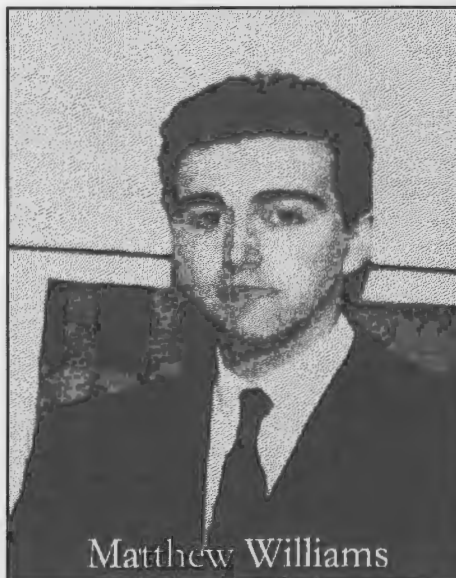

I have it on good authority that the secret societies have used these techniques in the last few years and one prominent in the use of channelling and remote viewing is the Royal Arch section of Freemasonry.

It would be obvious to say that if the use of remote viewing is widespread in America then it is also the same in the United Kingdom, probably under the scope of the military intelligence services. Sadly however, due to the immense secrecy that we have in the U.K. it has been hitherto impossible to find anything out about these remote viewing divisions.

Military experiments into remote viewing have gone further than simply viewing. Inside sources have put forward information to say that there are projects which utilise the remote viewer to act as a targeting device for psychic weaponry. Such weapons are based on psycho-kinetics which rely on the abilities of the psychics to wreak havoc, or on the more fantastic mind amplifier weapons which allow thoughts to be projected towards the enemy and effect their behaviour and ability to function. It is even claimed by some that development of mind amplifiers has led to a materialisation device which can both create objects or destroy them by changing their atomic structure. Some of these claims are given out by people who were involved in the so called "Montauk" project which includes the Philadelphia experiments use of mass energy devices which alter or temporarily distort matter.

TOWARDS THE HOLLOW MOUNTAIN

- "Did you know that a probe took that photograph over an area of Mars?", you will get an astonished look and the reply of - "You're kidding....". The conversation might develop then into an interesting banter resulting in the researcher blabbing out a host of accompanying facts and newpoints tied up with the topic of phenomena.

I believe that it is vitally important that the UFO researcher does not become discouraged with the apathy and ignorance of the general public. Situations arise where you can grab their attention and put forward theoretical arguments spiced with facts like the opening paragraphs of this article. Once you have their attention, then you can start showing them photographs, documents and the like and force them to open their minds a little bit. This is the main drive of speakers at conferences. A main key to remember is that aside from the usual colleague researchers you will find at conferences and lectures, you will have a group of people who have attended out of a fleeting fancy to find out more about a subject they had never really paid any attention to in their past. Strength in numbers strengthens the cause.

As I have stated in previous articles and issues, interest in UFOs and related topics can render a change within people. They begin to look at their world in a different light, appreciating more their place in the universe, appreciating more the wonders of nature around them and bringing respect for the ancient artefacts that grace the British Isles as symbols of a time when Mother Earth and its powers were revered. And now in a time when so much damage is being done to the environment and so much pollution is being poured into the veins of our world, a shift in consciousness is much needed to bring ourselves back from the brink of global devastation due to human ignorance.

I am not saying that everyone must turn to the study of Ufology in order to become more open minded and New Aged environmentally conscious. What I am saying is that for some fantastic reason, the search for intelligence from the stars invokes a caring passion for our home-world - and almost certainly if we are being watched from high in the skies, or even closer to home, and thinking about a world wide contact, they are waiting for a time when man will be more responsible with his own world, and his own race before he has a red carpet laid out before him to the cosmos.

What The Hell Happened At Waco?

By Matthew Williams

What you are about to read here may shock you, but as far as it has been perceived by this author it is the truth. I, to name but one person, was greatly disturbed to hear these revelations about the WACO siege.

I perhaps like many of yourselves, had watched the televised reports of the siege and empathised with the authorities in the way that they were attacked by these "Cult" members. I wished, like many, for a peaceful outcome to the events but sadly this was not to be. The problem was, as I was to learn, is that the television and major media had misrepresented the facts surrounding the events. This was partly due to their own negligence in not doing more thorough reporting of the siege and partly due to the fact that there was a total media clampdown on the siege after the FBI came in and took over all control of operations.

What was presented to the media was all they were allowed to have. The official line about each days happenings were censored and edited by the FBI so that the media saw the story as it was meant to be seen.

Even after the 51 day siege/barricade was finally over, elements of the siege were hidden, lied about and misrepresented in order to cover those who so blatantly acted against the laws of not just the United States but against human decency.

Now that I have become aware of all the facts I suspect that there were bigger issues at play with the authorities who carried out the assaults on the WACO centre. I think that when it comes to getting a job done certain high levels of authority sanction the use of any amount of force regardless of the costs to human life. They worry about the consequences later. There is a possibility that new and untried tactics were given a first airing at this siege, but should such "practice" be undertaken in live-fire situations where peoples lives are at risk. Read on and be disgusted at the farce that is WACO.

Where the exaggerated media stories came from was certainly not from the mind of sane and competent journalists but from: 1. The bitter and twisted minds of two men who had grudges to bear against David Koresh. 2. Those government employees who were running the siege, and how they wanted their actions and those of the "Cult" to be seen and misrepresented, in order to dis-empower Davidians. 3. Those nieve (or perhaps guided by government) pressure groups such as Cult Awareness Network who were acting on bad information for their own crusades like "headless chicken".

In February 1993 the world started to learn about the "terrible" and "sinful" behaviour of one David Koresh, a cult member from WACO. Prior to this time his name and identity were almost unknown to the media. Many newspapers around the world took interest in the stories which it was getting from the news wire service which told of a cult of so-called Christians. This cult had allegedly perverted away from a true Christian belief system and had become involved in adulterous behaviour and practised ritual child sexual abuses. These claims had already been made in smaller media stories that stayed within the United States by disgruntled ex-Davidians (Followers of David Koresh).

The media stated that David Koresh and followers were members of a cult were believers in the end of the world, and were branded as a "death cult" who had been stockpiling weapons which they intended to use on the judgement day. Thanks to the total media misrepresentation the myth of Waco, and the misperception of these people as being maniacs has lived on in peoples minds. People still write about them and use these frames of reference without reading into the true facts - this is crazy, but so in line with modern day non-investigative journalism!

Mount Carmel soon into the siege

The story seems to start with the husband of a former branch Davidian. The husband, George Roden, had taken exception to David Koresh because of what appears to be Mr. Roden's own paranoia.. One day Roden summoned Koresh to attend a building in which Roden had apparently unearthed the dead body of a woman. The body was in a casket which was closed so the actual body was allegedly not seen as far as we know. Roden challenged Koresh to try to raise this body from the dead. David Koresh was not interested in trying any thing of the sort ,and instead left the premises and contacted the police to report the events. Police arrived and questioned Roden but could not prosecute Roden as there was no body found! This strange event was never properly explained but serves to show that there was prior antagonism from Mr. Roden.

Mr. Roden not satisfied with his earlier challenges then proceeded to slander David Koresh by stating that he had raped his 75 year old mother which resulted in her getting pregnant! These remarks caused Koresh to make a statement towards Roden which was edited and misused by the media during the siege. Koresh had said "If he thinks I got his 75 year old mother pregnant, then I am God." The media simply chose to represent the part of the statement which says "I am god", and attributing this as evidence of Koresh being a madman with a God mania. Most people can see how this statement was intended, but for the media it was used as a tool (both by protest groups and government) for misrepresentation of the truth. We have to ask the question why would somebody wish to show this man as being mad, unless there was an attempt to smear both Koresh and the people of the Mount Carmel, Waco camp?

Very little of what went on at the Waco compound was out of the ordinary. Contrary to the popular belief, the people who lived and worshipped at the compound were very peaceful and intelligent and most held responsible jobs in the community. Church services were very similar to those at any church and if anything were more lively due to the input and vitality of David Koresh, who believed he had a mission to spread God's word. The devotion of many of the worshippers caused the term Branch Davidian to be created to show a connection with Koresh out of love. Davidian texts are freely available and contain no suicide cult information, only those things you would expect to find in any Bible.

It was true that the compound did have a lot of weapons, but in relation to the number of people there were about 5 guns per person, which is not uncommon in that part of Texas which is renowned for firearms ownership anyhow! All guns that were kept at the compound were legal types and were purchased through legal means. All were licensed and had their taxes paid on them bar one which was pending registration. Regular inspections of the weapons was undertaken by the local sheriff of Waco, who was not only happy with the weapons but agreed that there was no worry in his mind about the Branch Davidians owning such weapons.

In 1987 a registered blind man named Marc Breault joined the branch Davidian group to worship. By 1989 he had grown tired of the groups direction and practices and decided to make a bid at splitting the Davidians opinions and trying to take leadership of the Group. His efforts were rejected by all those at the centre and so in 1989 he was eventually forced to leave due to his unfavoured attitude. He swore that he would get revenge on them all!

In the months following Mr. Breault proceeded to phone various news media services and Christian action/awareness groups to tell them of the terrible perversions of Gods word, and the acts of sin that were taking place at the Waco centre. Breault claimed that adulterous sex was taking place, with wife sharing and swapping as well as the fact that Koresh had multiple wives. He also stated that children were being ritually sexually abused by the Davidians. He also claimed that the gun stocks at the site would be used to confront anybody who tried to split the group up and that the people there were a menace.

Initially his rantings were not taken seriously by the media. However, eventually word of the stories began to stick and a group called Cult Awareness Network (C.A.N.) took up the story and started to campaign the media for something to be done about the terrible goings on at the Waco compound. All of this took place without any prior investigation by C.A.N. as to the veracity of the claims. Still the name and weight that C.A.N. seemed to carry did eventually move certain paper news media to cover the story. C.A.N. then started to get television interest on the story that the Davidians were infact a brainwashing cult and that they had helped de-program members who had escaped from the "cult".

The de-programming was infact carried out by persons who had no clinical background and were shady characters themselves. In case you do not realise, de-programming is itself a form of brainwashing, which means that those "escapees" may have in fact been given the suggestion to say that they were badly treated at the compound.

The Cult Awareness Network is an alleged Christian organisation which endeavours to make people aware of the dangers of "cults", by which definition it means anything other than standard Christian churches. C.A.N. is a worldwide organisation which has members and pseudo offices all around the world. It's tactics have always involved disinformation and outright lies against so called "cults", which C.A.N. will usually allege is conducting, adulterous acts, child sex abuse, gun stockpiling and drug offences.

It seems to matter nothing to C.A.N. that sometimes these lies that it puts out are sometimes damaging and serve to help only the rigid dogmas of the C.A.N.. They have been involved in very few legal cases to prove their allegations which they tend to make from afar, in order to avoid libel prosecution themselves. C.A.N. allegedly receive funding donations from the C.I.A., and it is assumed that this is for services rendered to the C.I.A for spreading disinformation towards specified targets.

It was around the same time as C.A.N. were doing their best to slander all that were resident at Waco that a disc-jockey named David Jewell got involved in a child custody battle with his wife Sheri Jewell. Sheri was a branch Davidian and lived at the Mount Carmel centre in WACO. It came to David Jewell's attention that Marc Breault was prepared to state in court that he had been witness to terrible acts at the Mount Carmel site. This it was hoped would probably have the effect of gaining custody of the children away from Mrs. Jewell and given to Mr. Jewell. Marc Breault testified in court and once again stated that he had been witness to adultery, child sexual abuse and gun stockpiling. [I am not aware if Mr. Jewell did indeed win his battle?]

In 1991, after the custody case was wound up, a warrant was drawn up on the allegations of Mr. Breault and the Texas welfare department searched the Mount Carmel premises and took custody of all the children at the complex. During the months that followed, after psyche evaluations and interviews with all concerned, it was determined beyond all doubt that there was no foundation for the allegations of child sexual abuse and subsequently the children were returned to their families at the centre. Texas sheriff's also searched the premises to check the allegations of gun stockpiling but found that all weapons at the site were legal and licensed and subsequently left the premises happy that no laws had been broken.

A.T.F. (Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms) is the official name of the Government body which deals with taxation of these named items. They are similar to British Excise and VAT officers in both legal powers and modus operandi. They were also alerted to the claims that guns at the Mount Carmel site were not properly licensed and taxed. They attended the centre and found many discrepancies in the inventory for stored firearms. They believed that some of the weapons were automatic, were not licensed and that some had not been taxed. There were a few weapons which were not legal to own and were of a non standard type.

The problem arises however when it is found out that the person who attended the site to check the weapons made many errors in his report which shows that infact he did not have the slightest idea of what most guns looked like, let alone how they were standard shipped. This invalidated any further investigation that should have taken place but on the fact that, as the officer was supposed to have known what he was doing a warrant was made to search the Waco compound and seize all illegal weapons. It turns out that in fact all weapons at the centre were legal and licensed. A check with the local sheriff would have confirmed this, but was not attempted - ATF took the words of Breault and others above normal operating procedures. If they had checked with the sheriff, perhaps the siege could have been avoided all together.

A.T.F. by definition does not have any scope of purpose under the law to police for drugs offences nor welfare issues such as those of child sexual abuse. Welfare cases are dealt with by local law enforcement not federal! Yet when a warrant for search of premises was drawn up, quite staggeringly, it included the charges of not only child sexual abuse, gun stockpiling but also that there was a suspected meth-amphetamine laboratory (hard drugs manufacturing) at the site. Although the Cult Awareness Network had made claims of drug abuse at Mount Carmel, no evidence had been found by the welfare department, nor county sheriff, that any drugs were being abused at the centre prior to this warrant. Even though the issue of drugs had never been pressed by the local authorities, who should have known, it still stayed on the search warrant as a valid reason to search. Do not forget that A.T.F. were not empowered to undertake drugs searches in the first place.

By U.S. law it is illegal to use United States Army or other military forces against United States citizens inside the country. This is laid down in very early law statutes. There was an amendment to this made recently which gives powers to law officials taking part in customs or drug interdiction operations to make use of military vehicles or personnel in such operations, due to the aggressive and very well armed forces of drug barons etc.

The clever thing about the inclusion in the warrant of the possible amphetamine lab at the Mount Carmel centre was that large scale drugs interdiction offences lead the way to the use of this law, and allowed the A.T.F. to request the use of military equipment for the operation. As a final note, after the siege had started the judge who authorised the use of military weapons was made aware of the lack of evidence to support the drugs claims, which invalidated the warrant. The judge did not withdraw the authority for the use of the military equipment and allowed the weapons and personnel to stay.

On February 28th 1993 the A.T.F. in unmarked vehicles made it's way towards the Mount Carmel centre. Inside the unmarked armoured cars and lorries were plain clothed A.T.F. personnel armed to the teeth with automatic pistols, rifles, grenades, gas grenades and stun grenades. They approached from a few angles whilst other officers walked in from the surrounding fields.

Meanwhile at the telephone exchange an illegal phone tap had been put in place without a warrant nor prior arrangement with the relevant agencies.

All at once a rush move was made at the centre with officers and agents moving in around each side of the building, with many vehicles at the front of the building. It was stated in a report that no identification was made between the A.T.F. officers and those inside the complex - instead when people had come to the front door they had been ordered to come out and lie down on the floor. This did not happen and it is not known for certain who fired the first shot - but interestingly the following happened.

A phone call was made to the local sheriff's office by Wayne Martin from inside the compound. Here is what was first said as the A.T.F. came near the building: "911: Hello what's your emergency?", "Wayne Martin: There's 75 men around our building and they're shooting at us!".

The operator pretended not to know what was happening even though she was fully aware of the line tap - she feigned ignorance. When she returned Mr. Martin stated "There are women and children in here, tell them to call it off." It does not seem from these statements that the Davidians were admitting to firing the first shot so perhaps we will never know.

Even later on in the same phone conversation another Davidian comes to the phone and says: "There are other choppers with more people and guns going off... here they come. That's them firing, not us!".

David Koresh is heard to say on the same recorded 911 tape, "No, no, no. Let me tell you something... You see, you brought a bunch of guys out here, and you killed some of my children. We told you we wanted to talk."

The evidence at the time of the A.T.F. raid shows that the Davidians are trying to calm down the situation and were prepared to have talked, and it does not appear that they opened fire, yet as they speak on the phone Helicopters with automatic guns are flying over the centre indiscriminately firing down from above. As anybody knows, firing a gun from a moving vehicle is not easy, especially one which has as much vibration as a helicopter. To fire down randomly at buildings not knowing the whereabouts of the occupants - some of which are women and children - is utter lunacy. Given the inaccuracy of fire from a helicopter, even if there locations of all persons was known, the chances of stray fire hitting someone are too great to risk using such an attack method. Still the choppers were heard on the phone, video-taped, and admitted to by the A.T.F.. Women and innocent children were inside the buildings!

In video footage which purports to be of the initial surrounding of the centre, we see twenty or so A.T.F. officers firing almost continuously into the building. The interesting thing is that through analysis of the sound of the shots it was determined that no shots were being fired from inside the building at the time that the outside firing was taking place.

No A.T.F. persons have ever stood trial for their actions in killing innocent persons at the Mount Carmel centre. It seems as if a free trigger order had been given. Yet we see in video-taped sequences the incompetence of A.T.F. officers as they "storm" the building, but nobody in the legal world ever took the videotaped sequences seriously, if they watched them at all.

Whilst the initial front of house "hold down fire" - a diversionary tactic (?) was being employed, two teams had positioned ladders on the side wall of the centre, and officers had just started to ascend. One A.T.F. officer manages to shoot himself in the leg. When the officers reach the roof three of them enter a window whilst one person remains outside for backup. Incredibly only seconds after the officers have gone in through the window the officer who is waiting outside decides to throw a grenade inside and without looking, fires his automatic rifle in from behind a curtain. The response to his actions are swift and to the point - bullets spray out from the inside of the building and one of them hits the lone officer who then has to leave the roof. He survived. Why the officer chooses to fire into a room, in which his partners have only just gone into, is unknown and no proper explanation is ever given in the official report.

We can also see through computer analysis of the video sequence that a helicopter overhead is also firing into the room area in which the three officers had just gone. Again, how does the helicopter know where it is safe to fire? If this isn't mysterious enough, the three officers who entered the room surprisingly did not die through injuries sustained through the stupidity of the external A.T.F. officers but instead were all found with shots to the head in an professional execution style. It then surfaced that two of the officers who went into this room were infact former bodyguards of Bill Clinton. The suspicion is that the indiscriminate shooting into that room was perhaps an attempt to kill these officers, under orders from somebody, in the hope that it would be blamed on the Davidians?

Another interesting point about this section of video-tape is that the sound has been re-dubbed to given a false impression of who is doing the firing. Like so many pieces of footage presented to the media - parts were edited by skilled teams and only the censored bits allowed out. This was to give a distorted impression of events and make it appear that the Davidians were more to blame than they really were. Thankfully not enough care was taken in the doctoring of photo's and video that was released to the press and for this reason alone most of this evidence presented here has been possible. Imagine if they had done a good job at doctoring - we would not know the true facts.

One A.T.F. spokesperson stated at a press conference that A.T.F. had expected there to be a shoot out with the Davidians, but offered no explanation for why this was thought. Local law officials were more than happy with the conduct of the Davidian members. It is only the outside force of the A.T.F. perhaps through the misrepresented media coverage before the siege and the efforts of the Cult Awareness Network, or Rodan or Breault that caused such concerns - but not legitimately.

The siege went on for 51 days - quite a sizeable amount of time. Quite soon after it was started the A.T.F. decided not to allow people out of the complex until skilled negotiators from the F.B.I. had been called in. Once the F.B.I. arrived all control of the situation was turned over. The F.B.I. closed all channels of communication with the outside world for the Davidians. They even jammed the C.B. and HAM radio channels so that no messages could be given. This has led to allegations that the F.B.I. would not let the Davidians out. Indeed, the Davidians that survived have made the claim that they were kept inside the compound, and that they were not allowed out by the F.B.I.. Some branch Davidians who were unarmed were shot as they left the premises.

Bodies of dead Branch Davidians were left out in the open for many days even though the area around the house was proven safe to move around in by many officers who did just that, and walked next to the bodies. British S.A.S. officers walked up to the side of the building and drilled holes in the walls and placed radio linked video cameras inside the building so that the whereabouts of all people could be monitored. In addition the S.A.S. also had state of the art thermal imaging cameras which would allow the operator to see clearly through the wooden walls of the centre - so again allowing the safe manoeuvring of personnel around the outsides of the buildings.

Still the bodies were left to rot out in the open air in the heat. One body which was eventually removed by grappling hook from a helicopter fell apart as it was lifted. This horrific sight was also captured on film - just more evidence of the insensitivity of those people concerned with the Waco siege. Relatives were not informed of any deaths of Branch Davidians until after the siege, even when bodies such as these were shown on television being collected in this manner.

Whilst the siege took place, tanks and armoured vehicles patrolled the edges of the building. Occasionally a tank would butt a hole through the side of a building or smash windows in order to intimidate the people inside. This sort of over-the-top aggression shows that whilst it was obvious that the building could easily be exposed using the tanks, to offer no place for the Davidians to hide, it was chosen that they should be left inside and taunted for 51 days instead.

The taunting went even further - search lights were employed all though the night as well as high powered strobe beams. Loud music which contained specially military developed subliminal messages was played outside the windows 24 hours a day. Top Secret mind control devices such a radio transmitters and video projection devices were brought in. The possible effect of such devices may have been to disturb/confuse the minds of those inside so they would either make rash decisions or start gunfire - perhaps give themselves up?

However since the whole compound was rigged for sound and vision it would have been very easy for the F.B.I. to strategically force the occupants out. The fact that they did not try to get the Davidians to leave the compound using the tanks which were impervious to bullets anyhow does not enter the question of the FBI's negligence. Instead they used flame throwers and CS gas, along with a cut off of food and water to the site so that people would eventually be starved out. Were "hold off" tactics employed for something else - perhaps something sinister?

Flame throwing tanks came on to the scene and started a fire in one building in order to move people into a new area. The fire spread quickly and soon engulfed the whole site. Although there were fire trucks present at the site and these were ready to aid in the doubting of the fire, they were held back. The fire was allowed to rage onwards regardless of the peoples safety inside the complex. Who's decision was that?

As it happens it did not matter anyway because most of the people of the Mount Carmel center were dead by this time already. As it turns out most of them had fled to an underground bunker. The authorities must have known that this bunker was in existence and known that it was full of women and children. Instead of seeing that this bunker was kept safe, somebody in a tank set fire (perhaps on purpose) to it, and somebody else in control parked another tank on it's entrance so that nobody could escape... Who's decision was that!

The whole issue of Waco is one big cover up. In my estimation it was a plan decided upon from a high power government agency, for unknown but sinister "cult" busting reasons. The intention was to use this as an example to similar cults and political groups that they are not safe. The way the events were executed with a ruthless lack of regard for civilians and questionable methods, then covered up in true secret service style, stinks as bad as the JFK assassination. The whole thing was engineered and slowly people are starting to see this. The question is who and why drew up the plans.

What disturbs me is the fact that the government social engineering policy at the moment seems to be stereotyping groups of people into various brackets such as "cults" or "new agers". This is being portrayed as a threat to the majority in order to social engineer people into accepting new laws. The Criminal Justice Bill in the United Kingdom is one such law and there are more planned.

It is becoming too easy to be branded as a terrorist or activist or cult group and then to have those in power make up excuses to raid your premises or illegally intervene in your activities. The authorities always get away with their actions because they are the authorities. If you or I are suspected of something, we can be arrested, detained, harassed - but we can take no such action against the parties in authorities involved because they are almost above reproach. If I am illegally harassed by a police officer, I can not harass him back - nor can I get the police to harass him the way he has harassed me. The system doesn't work that way - it is always the person or group that is the underdog and this is why we must be protected. Looking at the way laws are being changed at the moment not just in the UK, but also in the US, we can see that power is slowly being taken away from the people and more powers being given to government.

What I say is if they can do it to law abiding Americans, like they did at Waco, then they can do it to you and me. So if you have any plans of getting a group of people together, no matter what you are doing, saying or acting out, you too can be labelled a cult, and perhaps feel the full weight persecution. We are almost back to witch hunts of the 90's!

A video-tape which chronicles many of these amazing facts is available from NEXUS magazine, 55 Queens Road, East Grinstead, West Sussex. RH19 1BG. for the miserly sum of £15. Entitled "WACO THE BIG LIE" It will shock and confirm all of the above for you! You were warned - the world isn't a nice place...

Matthew Williams

As a footnote. Parallels have been drawn between "suicide cults" of Europe and the Waco cult. We cannot be sure that there secret service involvement in the European cult members deaths. However some of the deaths were not explainable as suicides as you can not tie your own hands behind your back after committing suicide! It may be that where as Waco was a public execution of a "cult" group, perhaps the European deaths were a covert execution of a "cult" group who may have been more politically active. After all we saw what the French secret service did to the Rainbow Warrior, and British S.A.S. did to Irish suspects in Gibraltar. The power of government is great!

One last note: It was pointed out to me that the latest European suicide cult had bodies arranged in circles. A similar mysterious event happened in Berlin after the German defeat of the WW2 - bodies were seen lined up in circles. The apparent cause of death was unknown and the bodies appeared to be laid down quite peacefully. One strange point to this was that a lot of the bodies looked slightly mutated, almost Asian in some qualities, it was reported. Many of the British troops who entered Berlin were disturbed by this sight and details of this strange phenomena were made, but have been kept secret by the British government. That's all I know. Any more info anybody?

Mount Carmel after the fire had started

Luciene on Lucidity

By Matthew Williams

Having seen Luciene Morgan give a lecture at BUFORA in 1995, I decided to hunt him down to see where his interesting research into the paranormal has taken him. Surprisingly, and just in time for this months edition, he tells us of his Remote Viewing endeavours. The interview took place on Dec. 16th at 5:30 in London.

MW: How would you describe yourself and what is your interest in paranormal phenomena - daytime job etc.

LM: As my daytime job I am a dreams analyst. I also do a bit of broadcasting on "LIVE TV" (Cable Channel in UK). I am also a producer of pop videos and a film producer. I act, and have a few films I have recently starred in coming out soon. I lecture and teach on screen-writing.

On the paranormal front I am a dreams researcher, a paranormal investigator and have been on a number of ghost watches. Most of my work is to do with dreams and dream lucidity and telepathy. I believe telepathy is quite natural and is going to be quite commonplace in the next couple of centuries. I think people will be able to condition themselves into seeing this as normal and then people will begin to become telepathic. I am looking at various techniques to develop telepathy. I think in the past telepathy was taken as very normal and used in past civilisations such as MU, in the South Pacific. I have had lucid dreams of MU, and next year I am going to be filming a documentary on MU which will involve investigations around the south seas area, including diving to explore underwater ruins.

MW: Can I ask you how you got into these paranormal subjects. What started you off?

LM: All of my life I have been interested in the paranormal, UFO's and lost continents as far back as I can remember. I had a lot of lucid dreams of goddesses and MU that were a trigger. This led me into paranormal investigations around 1977, including work in Miami at Andross Island and in, Europe looking into various cults. I have met a lot of people, and seen a lot of things!

At the moment I am shocked by the state of British Ufology. There are many other UFO outfits working elsewhere in the work that I respect though.

MW: Can you describe exactly what a lucid dream is.

LM: It is the facility whereby somebody is aware that they are asleep and can then control their dreams. I believe there are further philosophical ideas related to this. I think that dreams produce our realities, and the fabric of our dreams control the material of our world. This seems now to fit in more with what we are learning about quantum physics and quantum dynamics. People like Doctor Fred Allen Wolf of University of San Diego has infact quoted from me. Dr. Wolf has experienced many lucid dreams himself.

MW: So how do these dreams affect reality in everyday life.

LM: Some people believe in a deeper meaning and truth to their dreams. They facilitate the dreams and control the dreams. I am not a control freak, and do still enjoy the unexpected. To answer your question I would say that people do create and live in their own realities. The way they perceive the world may be different to the average man in the street without realising it, and indeed we all have our own realities.

MW: Do realities clash I.E.: Can one persons reality clash with another persons reality? How can two realities exist in the same space.

LM: They can conflict, but they do share the same space. Sometimes where they overlap there is collapse. There is also perhaps a third force that comes in, perhaps a law of physics or even a higher law which comes in to sort things out and to flatten the creases. I think however that there is great truth in saying that one does not know it all though, and I would like to explore these concepts further in my writings one day.

MW: Can you explain some ways that people create their own realities and what is in them.

LM: Sometimes people meet partners in their dreams and then one day they will meet them at a party or somewhere. Doctor Keith Hurd says this is such a common example - he speaks about and operates remote viewing systems. These are where you can see a distant place for instance, the MU projects I am working on with my small remote viewing team, these sorts of things.

Actually I am quite surprised on how much information is coming from the Internet at the moment on MU. Harbour like complexes discovered on the sea floor, by John Alexander, to name just one. John Alexander being of "Penguin" of the "Aviary" fame. Also temple pillars, small curving boulevards, avenues, majestic temples and pyramids. These radiate out from the town centres as if spokes on wheel, out from a central point. Some of these have been video-taped by Captain Verajo of a Spanish salvage ship. I have records of a huge 11 room pyramid found 10,000 feet underwater in the mid Atlantic, this would be Atlantis. Reports of Soviet expeditions to the mid Atlantic to investigate strange underwater ruins that are part covered by lava. A huge pyramid found underwater in the Bahamas, a Sunken City found underwater by Soviet expeditions team off shores of Portugal. In the Pacific there were ruins found of an ancient city on the ocean floor of Wanepe island. Ruins found underwater near Easter island. Ruined roads found leading into the sea on another island. There is absolutely stacks of evidence coming from the Internet. I am also in contact with some researchers in Mowi regarding Lemuri.

Basically Lemuri was an advanced civilisation where everyone was psychic, it was normal to be telepathic and to dream lucidly, they even had the power of teleportation.

MW: Can you explain quickly about the "Aviary"

LM: Yes, this was a rumour that was circulated about a secret group working for the government who were infiltrating UFO groups. John Alexander was code-named "Penguin", Nick Pope of the MOD Airstaff was known as "Woodpecker" and I was known as the "Swan". There are many others but this is all just nonsense.

MW: How is your remote viewing team made up?

LM: I have a few remote viewers that I work with, mostly women for reasons I will get on to later, and I work with them on fairly standard Remote viewing techniques. We are trying to map and explore MU through this. Really I consider my own position in this group to be a sort of surveyor general of Doyan map making.

MW: A Christopher Columbus of the lost worlds!

LM: (Laughs) There is vast evidence of this sort of thing out there. What I want to be able to do next is to take a boat there and dive, show that these things are there and then come back and show them on television. This would be my end goal to prove it is there. This would be just great. If anyone out there has an ocean-going yacht and wants to get involved in the project then please get in touch with me. However I do think it would take a few expeditions though, perhaps several to get decent results.

MW: When you use remote viewing or other viewing techniques how do you tell if you are infact creating your own realities of perhaps seeing into the future, if there is a difference?

LM: I really don't know. I suppose the proof of the pudding is in the eating. Some of this could be sheer fantasy but the important thing is that out of the bits of fantasy comes something solid and concrete that I can film and report on. The more we believe, the more we can create. I must say that I am absolutely devastated by some of the information that we have been getting through, and how this correlates exactly with what I am getting from my remote viewers who do not know about this information.

One of my girls is Russian and was trained by a Russian institute in parapsychology. I am going to go with her to Moscow quite soon to discuss some of our findings to these people and see if they can help further.

MW: What I would like to make here is a distinction of perhaps creating actual realities and simply being able to remote view things which already exist. Can you make such a distinction?

LM: Well I don't exactly know this works but I do know that under certain circumstances I think we can create actual realities, or mentally project thought-forms. For example some people believe in the alien type called the "GREYS", and these may infact be some sort of thought-form. In some way I think that the investigator or experiencer creates the phenomena.

I think that these thought forms sometimes play up. In ceremonial magic this is termed as the Holy Guardian Angel and likewise this creates phenomena.

MW: How would you describe this Holy Guardian angel or higher power?

LM: As a goddess. I am personally a goddess worshipper. I think it is the feminine energy which creates the phenomena and stella magic from the stars.

MW: Where does all the energy start from? Who creates it first, or is it present in the stars.

LM: I think we do, I also think it is natural. It's like the song, "The Continental": it does what you want it to do. The key to this is the goddess worship and goddess energy as used by pre-monumental Egyptians - Draconian Egyptians, and older races. I also think that MU used goddess worship with the male used as the dynamic.

MW: OK, so how would somebody start accessing some of these things. Lets say start with remote viewing.

LM: I would firstly find myself somebody who was already good at lucid dreaming. I would then work with them with hypnosis, or at least what is termed as "hypnosis"; I really think it's mesmerism. I am able to hypnotise people which helps, and I will use certain hypnotic techniques to facilitate energies and to be aware of the stars and their currents. You see, I think dreams can infact be a real world, dreamland is a real place.

To digress, as a "goddess worshipper", part of the secret of these things I talk about is that a belief in the goddess will make the energies meet. So when one meets a goddess it is half through a self created belief and half through energy from the stars. It's an old occult secret.

MW: You order your own reality.

LM: Yes and to go back to the original point this is why female remote viewers are so very good, because they are in touch with the goddess energy.

MW: Does this mean that one has to deal with such things with a feminine person or manner in order to get the best results from both lucid dream worlds and remote viewing?

LM: Yes, when I send people to remote view places I not only tell them to see the place but also to be aware of the stella currents, such as those from Sirius - Lyraa Etc; try to put a psychic lock on them. In order to help visualise this could be like a cord which stretches out to touch the place or energy.

I am not sure that it is suitable discussion for this article but one should get a girlfriend if you want to develop remote viewing.

MW: Do you mean use of tantric sex magic and similar methods.

LM: Yes that's exactly what I mean. I have studied a lot of texts on this sort of thing and it does work. There was a goddess of lucid dreaming called Svapnavatayai and some of this is discussed in stories about her. There is Ma'at and Nuit who are goddesses of truth and justice. To invoke Ma'at and Nuit together would create a dynamic out of time and space. The invocation would be a form of sex magic, or hypnosis, or just simple awareness. Another way is reality testing is where you carry a card with you and written on the card are the words "Is this real". You check reality every time you look at the card and this makes you more aware.

MW: You seem to use mechanisms a lot in your work as opposed to intuitive methods can you describe other mechanisms for remote viewing.

LM: Yes. Peace and quiet, being in the countryside, stillness. Try to tune into a pacifistic vibration of nature. Try to imagine sailing a boat or riding a horse through the countryside these can trigger remote viewing. Also girls - women! (laughs)

MW: So does remote viewing get triggered whilst having sex?

LM: Yes it does.

MW: (Laughs) One cannot help imagine that if you were remote viewing whilst having sex, then you would not be keeping your mind on the job as it were.

LM: Ah, it depends what the job is. Oh hell all this sex stuff, let's be outrageous then, who cares!

MW: What sorts of things so people report when they remote view.

LM: In the case of the place MU, Lemuria, they would report vast underwater cities and many other facts that can be correlated with the information that people have been sending me.

MW: Are you aware of the remote viewing experiments and methods used by the CIA over the last 20 years?

LM: I am aware that work has been done but am not very familiar with the methods of Indigo Swann. [Head of the remote viewing projects at the Stanford Research Institute under the CIA] It seems however to be very different to the way that I do my work - certainly by what I read from Major Edward Dames, who was one of the remote viewers.

I think the techniques used by Indigo Swann differed from mine. His seemed to put undue strain on the remote viewers and caused them to remote view aliens and things such as this. They used to use stress to tune in to. I prefer to use countryside and nature to tune into when I remote view.

The thing is you create lokopas, alternate realities, or dream worlds which you can remote view into as well. I think that certain people like General Stubblebine, head of Armed Forces Intelligence used to believe in the alien abduction scenario and he may have forced people to remote view these things. People like Edward Dames were in touch with these "dream worlds". It may not be reality that is being viewed though. I have locked into alien worlds, but there may be millions of parallel universes and alien types. I don't dwell on these things as they don't interest me: I walked in said "hello" and walked out again - that's that. I think people who have gone to the Grey alien worlds have found out things but they give the greys far more respect than they warrant.

To go back a bit I must say that it is a bit misleading to say the CIA because there were many agencies interested in this sort of work. It is possible that many other agencies and military departments have had their own remote viewing projects, some of which may still be around even today. It's just that this one has now become public knowledge and has ceased operation. Russia had remote viewers as well as other countries including Britain. For example during the war we had what was code-named "The Dancing Fawn" group, and were using a person code-named Anne to remote view inside Nazi high command. It's quite well documented.

I also believe a lot of her work was a cover and there were many Nazi traitors who were giving information to our side and the story of Anne's ability was used to cover where some of the information was coming from - but not all information as there were brilliant results obtained from her remote viewing. Other remote viewing groups world-wide at that time included the "Red Orchestra", "The Lucy Ring" in Switzerland.

There was also somebody in a very high position in the Nazi Abwer - that means military intelligence - who was involved with remote viewing. The British codebreakers made use of remote viewing to get a lot of information and use the fabricated story of a high up mole in the Abwer giving codebreaking information in order to cause confusion amongst the Nazi ranks.

MW: About the alien worlds, what of the grey aliens.

LM: I think that the more people connect with these alien worlds then the more power that they give them. It draws these worlds closer and the possibility is that if you ignore them they will go away. I think that they are not that important in the scale of things and don't wish to meet them.

MW: What do you credit the recent upsurge in alien's and abductions to.

LM: Fashion. It's pretty dangerous if it upsets a lot of people psychologically. It's said that billions of Americans have been abducted but I think it's just a fashion and takes place in the mind. I once went to somebody who was experiencing aliens and got in with the aliens and told them to go away and they did. Simple as that. I have no interest at this present moment in them.

MW: In what ways do you think the government's or secret governments could stop people from using their hidden powers and remote viewing?

LM: There is absolutely nothing they can do to stop it. They could try to put a secret agent into everybody's house to see what's going on - but then most secret agents aren't that trustworthy anyway. I think that the best intelligence officers who look into this sort of thing have built-in self booby traps, that means they would defect anyway and go off to private enterprise, or the other side, anyway.

I think the emphasis is also on distraction away from peoples looking inward. Things like the national lottery and advertising, peoples daily lives, are far to distracting to allow people the time or ability to understand themselves. Most people need to relax and take command of their own lives.

They could however put out some disinformation about these things. They could try to say that this stuff doesn't work or to frighten people. However there are still CIA and other units using this stuff themselves.

MW: Do you think some of the distractions are self created or part of external forces.

LW: Both, I think that the average man in the street has no interest in Remote Viewing and just wants to watch the football and this is self created. I would hate to teach remote viewing to a bunch of rugby players. If that's the way people are conditioned and that's what they like, then let them get on with it.

MW: Well how do you think the average man in the street will change if he is so locked into his rugby and football etc.? What external force does this? If we are the minority how will we change the majority?

LM: I think that as more people do start to show the ability to lucid dream and remote view then it will start to be accepted by those who are hard to change. There isn't so much fear about these things, and we have the ability to practice them without being burned at the stake. I think that they will be become more accepted. I do also think that there is some external force and energy as well which will change attitudes.

MW: So how would you like to describe yourself now?

LM: Paranormal Investigator and Surveyor General of the International bureaux of lucid dreaming.

I am trying to make it surveyor because I am more than aware that lucidity can be active. By this I mean that there are things that one can make happen whilst in lucid dream states which have an offensive application - say for instance to damage a computer or disable a missile. I think there have been Russian attempts at such attacks. I don't want to get into this side if things that's why I am sticking to the title surveyor.

MW: Can you discuss you experiences with offensive applications.

LW: Well as it's such a sensitive issue I would rather do that in a lecture format as it helps contain some of the finer points. I don't get involved with that side of things you see, so best not for me to say too much really.

What I can say, is that governments and church both know that it is the feminine energy that causes phenomena and they have known and suppressed this for quite some time. I believe that in the past few centuries they have tried to suppress it in the same way that they have tried to suppress femininity and there is a cover-up. Say for instance, even last year there were police in France going around fining girls the equivalent of £20 for sunbathing top-less. In such a respectable country they want to preserve this middle class value system and they try to make this seem normal, at the same time it makes sure that in suppression that there is no more phenomena. They feel that women should be kept in their place because it triggers paranormal events such as UFO's and remote viewing.

I suppose Britain isn't bad compared to the mid west American bible belt states for paranormal suppression. I think that people have this idea of a middle class morality and this pushes them to create a very warped view of the world and what is reality. It's quite crazy that institutions like the church give such moralistic advice, it's just nonsense. It's OK as long as it makes society run properly but it's so clearly obvious that advice we get from churches and government about the way to live, and how to control the economy, doesn't work.

Things are on the change, though we will see many things in the next few years. I think that the expression of information through the Internet will help this process - the free exchange of information. The West has had it's day. I haven't remote viewed this but I think that the geology of the world will change as well with things such as global warming and the melting of the ice caps - this will create great changes in attitudes too.

MW: How would you then describe the recent rise in power of the female that we see. Would you say that this is part of another plan or is it something that people in power cannot stop?

LM: Well I think every dog has it's day and those days are over. I think they can try and pretend that they are in control but they are clearly not.

MW: Do you only work with females in your remote viewing work?

LM: Not exactly but it has just turned out that way at the moment. I do have a few English, Russian, French and American girls involved at the moment. All I know is that more women are more psychic than men, but it's not the rule. Next year perhaps we could get together and try some of this out and show you what we can do. Perhaps a few of us males could go to a place near you in Wales like the area known as Magic Valley, "Natygwaiht", and see what events are triggered off.

MW: Yes I would like that. Can you explain what solid evidence have you got to say that Remote Viewing works.

LM: Well on a personal level I have been able to make contact at marker points with a remote viewer named Kelly that I work with. We have met up under such conditions many times and from the meeting point we have been able to explore together, fly around, that sort of thing. I find this personal confirmation very interesting.

The only thing is that it is never 100% certain that these things will work. Infact there are many problems encountered. If it were simple to prove the existence of things that easily I would get the name of a winning horse at the races and make myself some money by betting on it.

MW: Why do you think that you cannot do that then?

LM: Well I have never actually tried to be perfectly honest. However we do have time in front of us and who knows?

I know this might sound sort of silly but when you are out there in the flow of sheer energy your values change. You may not want the same things once inside as you did from the outside.

MW: What other things do you want to get out of the use of remote viewing?

LM: I want to cut down on my telephone bills by making contact through remote viewing. I want to get the diving expedition together to confirm the under sea ruins of Mu.

I am also writing a book at the moment about lucid dreams and this will be out next year. Otherwise I am focusing on research on Mu, I don't want to spread myself all over the place at the moment.

I have had information that there is a Top Secret American naval intelligence research project into Mu. I am a bit like you Matthew and wonder sometimes about all this information - is it all true. I hope so.

I think there are other things I would like to find out about such as hidden learning. Books that contained ancient histories forgotten have been burned or locked away - the burning of the library at Alexandria containing some of the most important texts of history and of an occult nature perhaps, I would very much like to find out about those things.

MW: Do you think that there is a race to get to the secrets of Mu and when you get your expedition underway you will end up locking horns with governments intent on whisking away any secrets that they find.

LM: No I don't think there is a race. There have been dozens of expeditions to Mu already and I don't know what they have found apart from marble columns and structures. Colonel John Alexander's expedition found many things when he went to this region including what looks like a monorail system. I would like to find other things and give credit where it is due and say that I am not the man who found Mu, just exploring it.

MW: What is the real attraction behind Mu, is it a search for advanced technology?

LM: Advanced technology, anti gravity equipment, vast underground cities with libraries in which will contain information on keys for psychic abilities. I think that there will be information on stella energy and the stars themselves. The people of Mu used to traffic with other dimensions and this was an integral part of their society.

MW: Do you think any of these things could be used for bad purposes by governments, because I am trying to see if there is any military advantage in searching for Mu.

LM: Well there always is, but at the moment I think we are only talking about one well known top secret American military expedition to search for Mu. It may infact be that there is work being done, but it is by a more secret group or perhaps ex intelligence officers doing their own private enterprise work. We do not know for sure. It may be that these intelligence officers are more like pirates and are getting the Navy to pay for it, without knowing what they are paying for, because it is so top secret...

MW: Why do you think Mu lost it's foothold and didn't spread it's technology far enough or well enough to survive it's demise.

LM: I think something went out of kilter. Loss of control of some of the energies and some form of catastrophe. Perhaps we are heading the same way - it happens.

MW: have you ever been involved with any magical orders.

LM: Yes I have. It's not a secret, I did have something to do with a magical order in London. It was one of many outfits that exist but it wasn't a very big one itself. I have met many people involved with other orders, right throughout Europe. I found it all great fun and I met many colourful characters and the proof I got from this showed me that these paranormal abilities exist. There are some things that I saw which were very disturbing and do not discuss, but to give you an idea some of the things were like something out of a gothic horror novel.

MW: Does any of the magic help your current work and is it worth people investigating.

LM: I only use bits if I feel it is necessary. I think there is a certain amount of responsibility in my advising people to get involved with this sort of thing so I would have to say no - you have to hold on a bit tight in magical orders and keep your wits about you. I think we should do unto others as we would wish on ourselves, the rest is just conversation!

THE BLASPHEMOUS TRUTH

By Chris Davies

Have you ever considered the implications of the control that a religion can have over a society and its believers, religion can influence and infiltrate even the smallest corners of the everyday life of that society. Chris Davies explores some of the far reaching implications.

A religion can determine the way in which a person acts, how a person reacts to other people and new or differing ideology, it can control your eating habits, your working routine, even the speed in which the society develops. Those who minister that religion, be it knowingly or unknowingly, have at their disposal an unimaginable level of power and control, some believers are even willing to kill or die for their dogma. In my personal opinion having that kind of power is frightening.

For the moment take yourself back to the earliest time of what we might call structured religions, the world and its inhabitants were on the whole a very volatile lot, empires and kingdoms were rising and falling at a regular frequency. Try to imagine how in such violent times (is it any different now) it was possible with the time periods needed to cover such a measure of distance, either for fighting or communicating, the problem of maintaining stable communities and policing what one might see as problems.

Isn't it just possible that certain rules and conditions might be phased into existing religions or incorporated into new religions (remember that religions were coming and going on par with the rulers) with the hope that this would make the populace follow your designed path. If the people were strong enough believers then they would follow the rules as laid down without question. What better way to keep people in either a passive or aggressive state. It is an effective form of self policing. I think if one looks close enough at most religions past and present, you would find that they owe more to the hand of man than they do to the hand of God.

Some of you may say "I am not a religious person and I am not controlled by religion," just think for a second, how many of you have been to Cubs, Scouts or Guides - did you not swear an oath to God? Some of you may have been jurists or witnesses in a court case and, if so did you take an oath? Were you married in a church? As it's funny how many non religious people still become married in church. Are you God parents? If so you agreed to (if circumstances require) assist in the upbringing of that child in the Christian religion. The most obvious form of religious control over society that is relevant today and to most people is Christmas and Easter, the whole structure of our education can trace its roots to religious institutions, so whatever your religious conviction the control that it has over you is inescapable.

Now having established the importance and deep rooted position that religions have within mankind as a whole, how does society and the individual react when evidence comes to light that certain events that are supposed to have occurred in connection with religion and given some holy status, have in fact not happened or may have happened in a totally different manner. I can tell you from personal experiences as somewhat of a dispeller of faith that there are three main reactions one faces.

1) Shock and anger that you actually had the nerve to challenge something so holy and reverend.

2) Laughter and an ideology that you are some kind of crank.

3) Total refusal to accept or listen to the evidence.

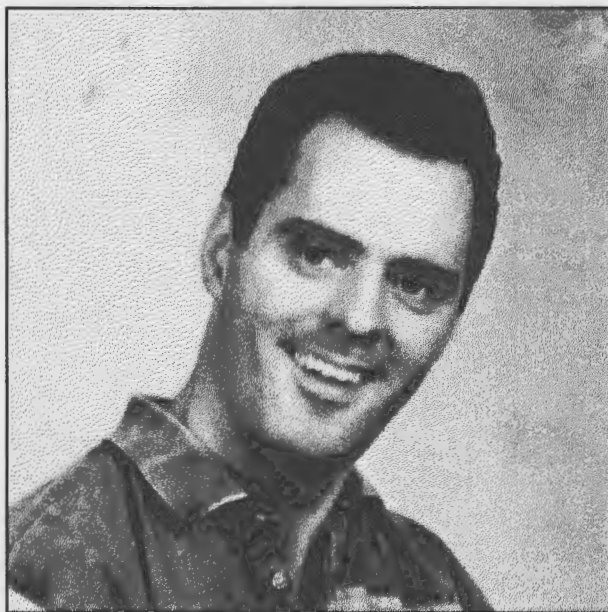

This is typical of what I call blind faith. Now don't get me wrong I have nothing against anyone who wish to be part of a religious group - most religions have good morals and ethical codes. My concern is for the way that many religions refuse scrutiny of the supposed content of their belief when the evidence makes suspect many of the claimed events that have taken place.

Let us just suppose that somehow, we managed to get evidence disputing religious events accepted and disseminated through the system so to speak, how then does that religion justify what it has been and continues to teach. Are we knocking away at the very foundations on which society is built? Could it be that we are facing the biggest lie ever perpetuated against the human race? Would the economy collapse, remember the churches in this country own an awful lot of land and property amongst other things.

Have you ever wondered how religion's first came about? It was probably through man trying to understand some of the things he was seeing but had no explanation for. Some of the first worshipped gods were the Sun, the Moon, the Stars and the elements; man was reaching out for answers, found none, so he created his own. The spiritual beginnings probably originated through mans fear of his own mortality and the unknown. The same great question that man asks today probably clawed at our distant ancestor's minds, "Is this all that I am is there nothing more?"

FACING THE FACTS

Some years ago excavations were carried out at the Syrian city of Telmardik by Italian archaeologists. The ancient name of this city was Elba, and beneath this ancient city was found an older city that contained a vast library complex. The ancient scripts were probably translations of earlier Summerian writings and indicated that this city was the capital of an unknown Caananite empire. The palace of this city was burned by a man named Sargon of Akhad whose birth legend is identical to that of Moses. We might therefore make the assumption that the story of Moses's birth was taken from the other man's life story. This same problem arises with the story of Noah and the Ark, it bears great resemblance to a much older sumerian tale, the similarities are too numerous to be just coincidence. So here we see where the Christian Bible has incorporated something from a completely different culture and religious beliefs, and does not represent the full truth.

I would like to break off from my theme for the minute and pose a thought for all you U.F.O. buffs, Richard Hoagland has been looking at the weathering of the Egyptian Sphinx which indicates that it is much older than first thought and at a time when there was an awful lot of water present. He is also presenting the theory of an extra terrestrial connection. On the other hand Zacheria Sitchin is trying to connect the summerians (the oldest civilisation know to man) to extra terrestrials, could, there have been a link between the two. The summerians have a tale like that of Noah that might hold the answers to the water question that Richard Hoagland is looking for. The worlds most ancient civilisation with an even older tale and what now appears to be the worlds oldest structure. It certainly makes you wonder...

MOSES AND THE ISRAELITES

Back to the task at hand. Were the Israelites ever held in bondage in Egypt? I am sorry to say there is absolutely no evidence to suggest this, only that they were not liked, Much as today's society dislikes new age travellers. There is also no evidence of Moses, the plagues or the Israelite exodus, the only mention that we do find is 1,000 years after the supposed events (3rd Century B.C.) by the Grand Visitor of Egypt, Menthia. He started a counter folklore stating that a gang of Asiatic lepers and plague bearers were expelled from Egypt.

MOSES AND THE EXODUS

The original name of the sea supposedly crossed by Moses was the Yam sea that means: "sea of reeds" this would tend to rule out the Red sea as we are told and would indicate that what was actually crossed was a reeded marshland. The Bible tells us that some 2,000 Israelites survived in the desert for 40 years on a substance called "Manna" that was given to them by God, in actual fact

Manna is a resin that is produced on tumbleweed through the action of insects. Manna is quite rare and could not be found in sufficient quantity to support one human being let alone 2,000. (Unless there was divine intervention of course!) The bible also tells us that Moses and the Israelites arrived at Bosra on the edge of the promised land of Caanen (Palestine) at around 1250 B.C. the problem that we find here is that the occupation of Bosra did not start until 800 B.C. We are then told that at Hezba the Exodus defeated an attacking Amerite army and then occupied the city, once again we find the same problem. No evidence can be found at Hezba of any late Bronze age Amerite or Iron-I or of Israelite occupation, in fact the occupation of Hezba did not start until after 700 B.C. What are we to assume? From the beginning to the end of this epic journey we can find no evidence to suggest that it even took place, what we do find though is evidence that strongly disputes the story and based on that evidence it appears that this is all that it is, just a story.

JOSHUA:

The Bible tells how Joshua supposedly defeated the inhabitants of the city of Hazor then burned it, archaeological evidence confirms that great destruction did take place at Hazor at the time of Joshua. It is after this that we begin to come into conflict with the Biblical accounts, Joshua is said to then have repeated this at the city of Ai and then went on to his famous Biblical defeat of Jerico. The conflicting problem here is, is that both of these latter cities were no more than ruins when Joshua came along and had been for some considerable time. Also there is no archaeological evidence to support the presence of Joshua or the Israelites at the city of Megiddo. It would appear also that the book of Judges contradicts Joshua's account of the take over of Caanen in that it was a peaceful and gradual infiltration. Other ancient records attribute the destruction of the Caanenite cities not to the Israelites but to the other tribes that later went on to attack Egypt.

SAMPSON:

Sampson was a famous guerrilla leader of the Israelites, he continually harassed the Philistines and was later captured. There was no trace of the city where Sampson is supposedly held although excavations at the city of Telkasili near Telaviv have revealed a Philistine temple. A small pottery object found at this place depicts a man with sideways outstretched arms, items like this could have helped start the legend of Sampson bringing down the temple of the Philistines. Contrary to Biblical description Philistine temples were very small and would only have held several people as only the priests were allowed in. The Bible attributes 3,000 to Sampsons temple which as the evidence shows is not keeping in with known facts. Was the story of Sampson blown out of all proportion or another part of another part of biblical story that must fall into the realms of mythology.

SAUL AND DAVID:

The Bible tells us in one part how David slew the giant Goliath but elsewhere it attributes this act to Elhaha son of Jair.

When Saul was defeated by the Philistines and his sons were killed he committed suicide by falling upon his own sword, after this act the Bible says his head was cut off and hung from the walls of Bethshan. All this is supposed to have happened at around 11th century B.C. Here again we must raise an eyebrow to the Biblical account as excavations at this city reveal no Philistine presence, the possibility is that it was an Egyptian city. Who were they fighting Philistine or Egypt? Is the whole story fact or fable?

SOLOMON:

Solomon the son of David is said to have ruled the joint kingdoms of Juda and Israel from 965 B.C. - 920 B.C. some 45 years.

Solomon is reputed to have had great riches and wisdom bestowed upon him by God and had 700 wives including the daughter of a Pharaoh, he is also credited with building the first temple at Jerusalem but no trace of it can be found. Solomon's reign is attributed to having considerable dealings with the great seafarers, the Phoenicians. Again Questions must be asked as there is no Phoenician or other contemporary record that make any mention of Solomon. Modern writing is attributed to the ancient Phoenicians by simplifying their scripts and introducing an alphabet, the earliest writings are from 1,000 B.C. some 50 or so years before the time of Solomon. Considering that Solomon is supposed to have had many scribes we find no Hebrew writings of the 10th century B.C. only a small verse on the seasons. Nowhere can we find evidence to confirm the existence of Solomon.

BABYLONIAN INFLUENCE:

The Babylonians first came to prominence at about 1750 B.C. under Hamurabi the great law giver, one of the most notable Babylonian laws was the Mosaic code which is literally "an eye for an eye" which shows itself later on in the Bible.

We should look at two points about the Babylonians which may point to the origin of a great Biblical Tale, one is a folklore the other is their buildings. Their folklore tells us how their Gods became so fed up with the confusion of languages that they sent down a great deluge, the Babylonians were also famous for their Ziggurat towers. Could these two things as seen and heard by the interned Israelite populace have been responsible for the origin of the tower of Babel? The Babylonians had interned some 20,000 Israelites who had taken with them the Tora which is the first five books of the teachings of Moses, a Babylonian Trait was to re-write old Summerian tales and it is thought that this trait spilled over into the Israelites interned there. It is therefore highly probable that much of the Bible was inspired and re-written by the rivers of Babylon.

GREEK INFLUENCE:

The Greek culture became the first western influence on the middle east which was referred to as Hellenism, Hellenism had a considerable impact on Judaism. We now see the idea of a central figure governing all things, the God Yaweh now becomes the God of all peoples instead of just the Israelites, this shows itself in the parable of Jonah and the whale.

To this point what can we say about the Bible with what archaeology has shown? We now know that the Bible contains folklore's taken from other folklore's and religions also that the bible has changed throughout its development and was influenced by the cultural environment and experiences by some of its recorders. We also know that the Bible contains a number of inaccuracies. All that we can say about the early Bible is that it is true to it's background such as the material culture and even though some of these cultures were poor they had great idealism, beyond that there is no archaeological proof of any of the patriarchs and epics depicted in the Bible.

THE DEAD SEA SCROLLS:

The Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered in 1937 by a young Arab boy in some caves near the Dead Sea, they are the oldest Biblical records known to exist. In these scrolls we have an insight into the Jewish religion at the time of Jesus, and what a profound insight that is. The information now coming forward from these scrolls is so profound that it could have drastic consequences for the Christian and Jewish faiths, maybe that is why much of the information in the scrolls was kept within a close group of Christian scholars for over 40 years.

Christianity as we know it today is attributable to Paul (St. Paul) but much of early Christianity is attributable to James who it is thought was Jesus' brother, he was the leader of the early church after Jesus' death. It is these two people amongst others who appear to be referred to in the scrolls. If the scrolls are actually the writings of the early Christian church then the information contained in the Gospels have been distorted. Prof. Robert Eisenman who has been studying the scrolls believes that many of them depict a violent aggressive group bent on vengeance and that St. Paul deliberately altered Jesus' teachings to a pacifistic level to make them more acceptable to the Romans. Information in the present Bible could bear witness this, when the Romans went to arrest Jesus who was with his disciples, they went armed, expecting resistance, and in essence that's what they got when one of them fell victim to a sword attack.

The Romans were no fools as is shown in the archaeological evidence of their occupation of Britain, they were happy for peaceful coexistence with the native populace under their rule, but if force was what was required then that was what they responded with. Why then when going to arrest Jesus did they send well armed troops to deal with a handful of pacifists? Was Jesus nothing more than a freedom fighter and a political activist who had become troublesome to the Romans?

If the evidence shatters everything that the Church has taught and millions come to believe in, how will the world react and come to terms with it? Will the Church at every level adjust the teachings to it's followers and believers and encompass that we are now beginning to discover or will it writhe and squirm and try to adjust the discoveries to fit the teachings. Will we find a wall of silence with the evidence swept under the carpet until such time as a hierarchy can find an acceptable answer?

Gulf Breeze Update

UFO Footage & Sightings update compiled by Chris Fowler

1995 was a very good year for UFO sightings in and around the Gulf Breeze / Pensacola area. In total, sixty three sightings were reported to the local Gulf Breeze / Pensacola MUFON group, but there are also other sightings that have occurred which haven't been included, as some are still under investigation and others weren't written up as the witnesses didn't give permission.

Most of the sightings took place during night time but there were also a number of daytime sightings, some of which were caught on video. As well as the familiar night time red light "Bubba" sighting (as it was nick named by the local skywatchers), there were many sightings of triangular and delta shaped UFOs which previously weren't seen much at all in the skies around Gulf Breeze.

New Daytime Ed Walters Footage

On July 21st 1995, what is probably one of the best daytime UFO videos was taken in Gulf Breeze by Ed Walters who is continuing to see and document UFO sightings. The following is his own article which he wrote and was printed in the September 27th edition of the Islander, the weekly Gulf Breeze community newspaper.

UFO's? Too Good To Be True by Ed Walters

For almost eight years the UFO sightings in the Gulf Breeze / Pensacola area have remained unsolved. Depending on your point of view there are only two answers: (1) The UFOs are real and as yet still unidentified, or (2) The UFOs are not real; they are simply unidentified.

Many scores of witnesses have come forward to tell of seeing a wingless, soundless, flying object perform aerial feats apparently impossible for conventional aircraft. Even so, either of the above answers can explain these single witness and multi-witness UFO sightings.

Scores of photographs and video tapes have been taken during local UFO sightings. If the photographs and video tapes show a distant glowing light, or the photographs show no structural detail, again, either of the above answers still apply.

But . . . what if . . . the photographs and video tapes show an "Oops, there it is," "knock your socks off," flying, wingless soundless object in broad daylight? But they would be wrong. The debate will continue despite any amount of definitive proof.

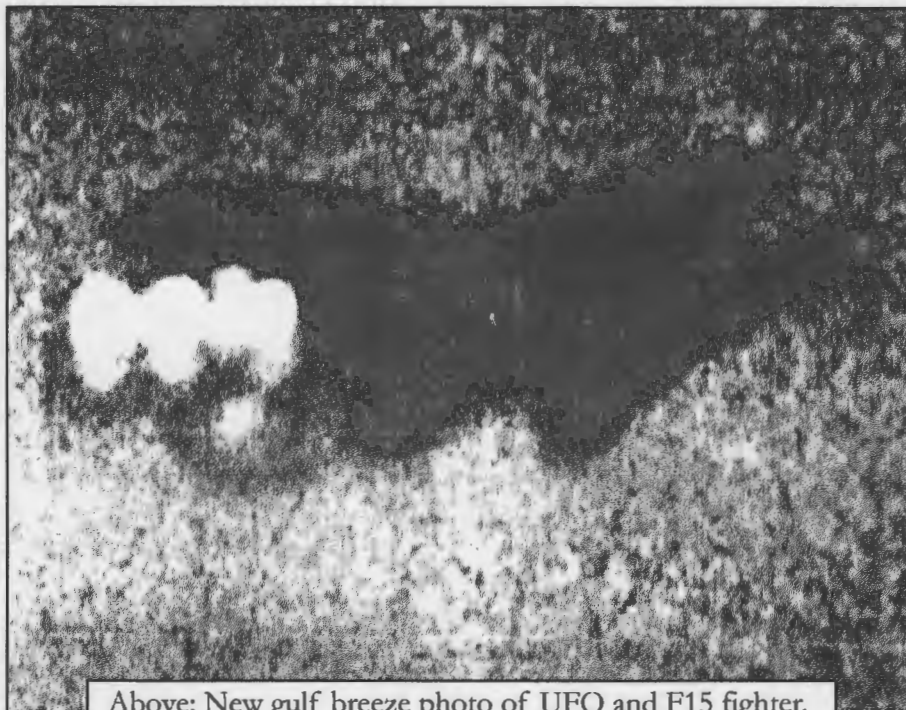

The reason for this is a psychological one (kind of a knee jerk, human nature kind of thing). The more Absolute the Evidence, The more It Cannot be Real, And Since It Cannot Be Real . . . answer # 2 applies . . . it must be a hoax. Why? Because if UFOs were real, our government officials would tell us everything they know about UFOs, wouldn't they? Therefore UFOs can't be real, right?

So here is the dilemma. What is it so many people are seeing? What is it they are photographing and video taping? The photographs I took eight years ago and some more recently show something that looks like what "it can't be." I wrote two books about what so many of us have seen or thought we saw.

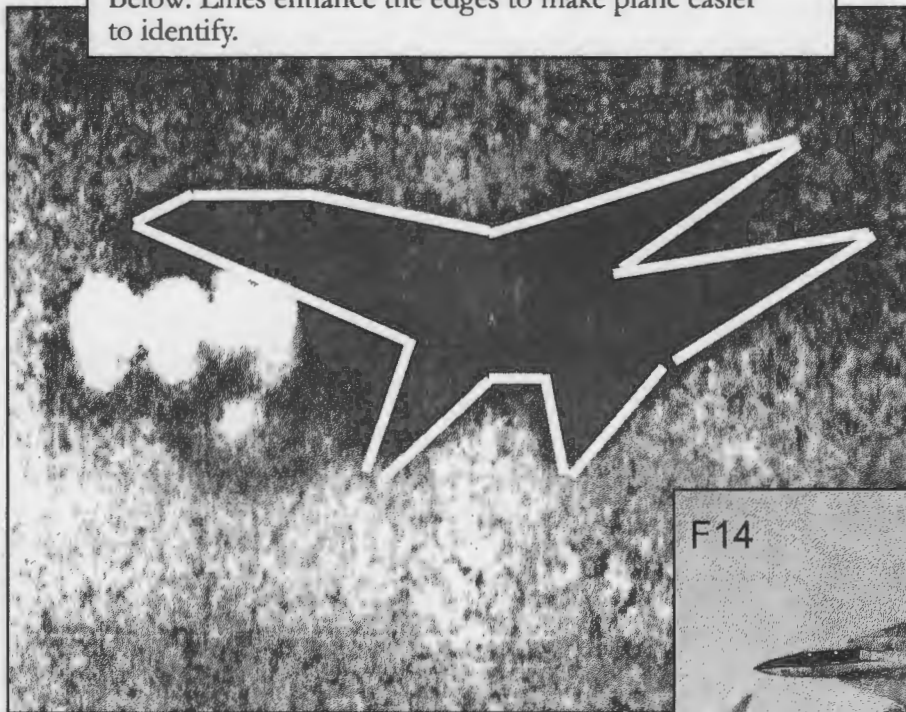

So, what is it? What was that spherical, silver object that shows so clearly in the picture I took on January 12th 1994. You know, that unbelievable picture that shows what "couldn't" be an F-15 jet fighter racing past in front of what "couldn't" be a UFO. The Air Force said the jet fighter was a Navy F-14. The Air Force said the non-UFO was "a bunch of weather balloons tied together."

Ah, now we are getting somewhere . . . "a bunch of weather balloons," great! At least it's an answer ( even though it doesn't even come close to looking like "a bunch of weather balloons" ) instead of the usual "no comment."

Below: Lines enhance the edges to make plane easier to identify.

Seriously, my point is this. There seems to be a normal reaction whenever clear, factual UFO evidence is presented. Which is, if the UFO evidence is too good, it can't be real.

Not so long ago, on July 21, I witnessed several "fly-bys" and captured them on video. The UFO can be seen clearly entering the field of view, crossing halfway ( camera was on full zoom ) and reversing direction. Below the UFO can be seen the Gulf Breeze shoreline, the Santa Rosa sound, and the 40-foot tall trees that cover Shoreline Park. The UFO briefly cast it's SHADOW on the trees that line the beach. What does it mean? The UFO is real; and the shadow proves it.

UFO witnesses, UFO photos, UFO videos, shadow evidence, etc, etc . . . So what do you think? Is it all too good and too much to be true? or are we witnessing an historic event?

Join me in considering the possibilities. Based on the world-wide distribution of The Gulf Breeze Sightings and UFO Abductions in Gulf Breeze, thousands of UFO witnesses continue to send me their sighting reports, their UFO photographs and videos. The evidence is overwhelming - but it is not too good to be true. It is too good to be ignored.

Other Daytime Gulf Breeze UFO Footage

Ed Walters isn't the only local resident who has video taped a UFO in daylight around Gulf Breeze. The first daytime UFO footage was taken during March 1993 by a witness on Pensacola Beach known as Martin "Allen" who has wished to remain anonymous. The witness on two occasions during the same day saw an object flash by overhead at great speed and decided to set up his video camera on his sun deck hooked up to the mains and left it recording with a two hour tape in whilst he went back to work in the afternoon. That night when he reviewed the tape he found that nothing apart from the usual air traffic had been captured on the tape, so the next day he did the same thing. Shortly after he set up the camera and started recording he saw the object once again flash overhead at a great speed and caught it on tape. The footage shows a metallic elliptical shaped object which passes across the field of view in a matter of seconds which indicated that it was doing a very high rate of speed.

The same witness again later on in the month managed to witness and video tape another UFO in daylight as it hovered motionless in the sky over Pensacola Beach.

This video was even more remarkable than the first taken by Martin "Allen", as on the footage the UFO can be seen to depart from a standstill so fast that it appears as if it had just disappeared. When analysis was done on the footage it was found that the UFO had accelerated from a standstill to over 2000 m.p.h. in under one thirtieth of a second, which is the length of just one frame on a video tape.

Another witness who also remains anonymous and is known as just "Phillip" also managed to video tape a daytime sighting as a UFO hovered over Gulf Breeze. On this footage a metallic object, which appears to resemble the shape of the UFOs Ed Walters photographed, is seen to hover in the sky not too far away before streaking away out of frame once again at a very high rate of speed.

Both the Martin "Allen" and "Phillip" videos have been featured on a segment of the Fox TV programme "Sightings" which was shown in the UK on Sky One during October 1994. Also featured on the programme was a daytime UFO video taken by Ed Walters on November 28th 1993 which shows a UFO hovering in the sky once again over Pensacola Beach before it just suddenly blinks out as if it just vanished.

Night Time Footage

Many other impressive pieces of footage taken during night time have been taken around Gulf Breeze. The best known footage has been taken by Bruce Morrison, who to date has over four hours of solid footage of the UFOs seen from Shoreline Park which dates from sightings in 1990 to the present.

What is mostly seen on his footage is a very bright light which ranges from red / orange to white that behaves in a unusual manner, flaring up to an intense bright light at times. Bruce has also managed to take footage which shows smaller lights which drop out and descend from the underside of the main UFO that is seen. Though no structural detail can be made out on most of the footage, it does seem as if what is being seen is possibly a UFO which has just it's bottom light on, as demonstrated in Ed Walters first UFO footage taken back in 1987. During this footage, the structured UFO blinks out and then comes back on with only it's bottom light remaining visible, as if to demonstrate what it can do. The UFO at this point closely resembles the ones which are seen and video taped by many ( including professional TV camera crews from ABC and Nippon TV Japan ) around Gulf Breeze.

A now well known piece of footage was taken there in May 1988 by a man on the beach who was house sitting for a friend. On the footage can be seen the small waves rolling in to the beach and beyond the shoreline in the sky, one by one UFOs start to appear until there are ten in all. The UFOs consist of bright whitish lights which all seem to have a red colour on the underside where the "power source" is on the UFOs originally photographed by Ed Walters. After hovering in the sky the objects blink out one by one just as they seemed to blink on when they arrived.

Night Time Footage From 1993

As well as some very good daylight UFO footage in 1993 being taken, there were also a few excellent night time videos that were also taken.

Footage taken in a similar setting to that of the May 1988 footage ( as just described ) shows three very bright structured UFOs hovering low over the water only a few hundred feet away. On the objects can be made out details such as the top "beacon" and as they hover a light reflection can also be made out on the water's surface underneath the UFOs. The impressive thing about this footage is that at one point, one of the UFOs is actually seen to dip down into the water leaving only it's top "beacon" visible protruding out of the water shortly before it comes back up. Many people report seeing UFOs emerge from and go into water and this footage certainly validates such reports.

Another video taken by an anonymous witness from Navarre near Gulf Breeze shows what seems to be a bright beam of light being shone from the underside of a bright light in the distance that is obscured by some trees. As well as this there can be seen other UFOs farther away in the distance in which some structure can be made out, similar to Ed Walters 1987 footage. As the UFOs move behind the closer bright light they are obscured from view which suggests that there was some structure above the light.

What is no doubt the best night time UFO footage taken around the area was taken by a witness known as Thomas "Bryant". On this footage can be seen two UFOs hovering not too far away in the sky side by side with some structure visible as well as a light on the underside. At one point on this footage what appears to be "liquid" of some sort is seen to fall from the underside of the UFO on the left shortly before the UFO on the right flies around it in a full circle. This footage validates what Ed Walters described seeing happen on December 17th 1987, as described in his book "The Gulf Breeze Sightings".

Sightings Update

The sightings at Gulf Breeze continued in November and December 1995 with major sightings occurring on November 17th when seventeen triangular configurations of lights were seen over Pensacola Beach in the space of two hours. On November 21st skywatchers at Shoreline Park watched two "extremely brilliantly lit" objects for a total of six minutes. One of the objects was seen to come down really low over Deer Point in Gulf Breeze as if it was landing before it disappeared.

Then on November 25th a local NBC affiliate anchor man in Pensacola video taped a daylight sighting over Pensacola. On the footage the object is observed to change shape and move erratically. The sighting is still under investigation at the moment and plans are being made to include the footage in an up-coming documentary on UFOs.

During December there were two sightings reported on the 1st and 14th and the sightings in 1996 got off to a start on January 4th when three sightings occurred in less than an hour which were witnessed by the skywatchers at Gulf Breeze.

There will be no doubt more UFO sightings occurring in the area which will be included in future issues of Truth Seekers Review, as will be reports of other goings on in the area. The fourth annual Gulf Breeze conference organised by Project Awareness will be taking place on Pensacola Beach on March 15th-17th and will include speakers such as Dr. John Mack, Stanton Friedman, Dr. Barry Downing and Whitley Strieber.

THE TRUTHSEEKERS INTERVIEW

Interview between Matthew Williams and Mr Busty Taylor 24/12/95 time 11:04.

MW: You are interested in crop circles. Could you give us a brief synopsis of how you got started?

BT: For a start I'd been into UFO's for years, I moved into crop circles in 1985 simply because I found a crop circle just down the road from where we're sitting, just three miles away. I realised that this was something that seemed to be important, and from that day on I've been looking into it. I've made a lot of discoveries in regards to ancient Celtic symbols. In six weeks I didn't sleep, I went berserk. I visited all the local museums, as well as those in London. I studied the measurements of Stonehenge because I had been an amateur archaeologist for years, working with the Andover archaeologists. I took aerial photographs of things they didn't know about, they would mark it on their maps and get the money to go and dig them up.

I've got video of work along the A303 where there was an ancient site that had to be gone through so we dug it up first.

Celtic symbolism was important. The Celtic symbols I photographed between 1985 and 1989 began to appear in the crops. In 1985 we had the first Celtic symbol, and in 1986 we had the first rune symbol, which was soon followed by a combination of Celtic and rune. From that day onwards I've treated the subject with the greatest of respect. It seemed to listen and know what we are about. Many people have said 'Oh that field would look nice with a crop circle in it' only to find that the next day that it has a crop circle. That has happened quite a few times.

MW: How would you explain the creation of crop circles in that particular manner?

BT: People must be on a wave length with nature. I am under the impression now that it's to do with UFOs because we know that they generate heat, and we've had that experience in crops. We've had cases of people thinking about UFOs and then they appear, a policeman from America wondered what it was like to be inside a UFO and then he was. Is it possible that we have a latent ability to move from place to place with any physical movement. For example, dematerialising and reappearing in another country or on another planet. I think this was once possible, and that for some reason it was taken away from us.

MW: Along with other powers of the mind?

BT: You could alter and adjust things, create things, physically mend broken bones all with mind control. I'm convinced that this type of thing happened in the past.

There are a lot of records of miracles. The only way we can get this back is somehow to trigger that part of the brain that has been lying dormant. A lot of people are saying that 'this symbol attracted me'. To the older generation, like myself, it was the Celtic symbols that were attractive, and to the younger generation it was the pictograms. I can roughly tell peoples ages when I ask them which crop circles they were attracted to.

MW: Do you feel that in some way if people have hidden powers of the mind, that its peoples thought processes which may be creating the crop circles as opposed to UFOs directly.

BT: I would say that its the mind pulling the UFOs through into the reality of today. They might be in a different dimension. There are many UFO statements from the 1960's from an encounter at Chilcombe near Winchester where a person in a spacecraft said 'these are our fields, what are you doing with our fields'? So it may be the fact that the planet definitely belongs to somebody that can pop backwards and forwards in time. I think that the genuine crop circles that are out there are created by a beam energy that either supports the ship while it is stationary, and this could mean varying heights, or from some remote geostationary position from which a survey can be carried out. One formation that I photographed in 1985 which consisted of two satellites with an area in between that looked as if it had been flattened.

There was a definite contrast from the outside. It seemed that something had just stopped dead on the top of the corn and had some physical type of force locking into the satellites. It is interesting that this particular formation appeared to fit in with designs of tumuli at Stonehenge.

MW: So there's a connection between ancient archaeological sites and crop circles?

BT: As far as I am concerned the answer is yes. In 1986 I worked out that the 1985 formation would fit inside Stonehenge and the surrounding ditch. We tried three circles, and they all fit in with the various dimensions of Stonehenge. Another circle that we tried, however, did not fit. We found out that this had been made by hoaxers. If all circles are man made why is it that they pick designs that represent the ancient past? How did they manage to do that on such a regular basis? That to me would be the height of impossibility.

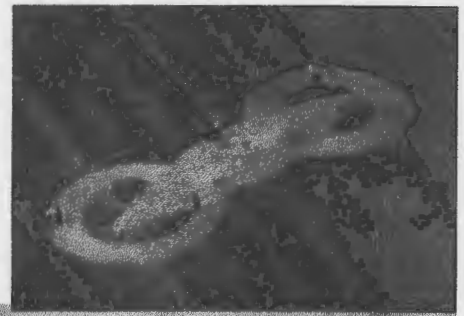

MW: I've spoken to people who claim to be circle makers and some of them have put forward the possibility that they are driven to make circles by some unusual force and they don't know quite why they do them. Could you accept that maybe people are being used?

BT: Its possible that people could be made to think that they should do things. You can't rule that out. I've spoken to various hoaxers and explained things to them that they were unaware of in relation to circles and some have become interested in the phenomena. Surely it would be better if the hoaxers researched the subject with us and not tried to make us look like fools in front of a television camera. Perhaps they'd have a surprise if they became a researcher. These people like to get their name in print and they proved their point on a minority of circles. But what about the vast number of others that were around at the same time. I've been through thousands of circles and I've seen things that I cannot explain.

MW: What would you describe as the properties of a genuine circle?

BT: Its very difficult to find a genuine circle to investigate because too many people get in before you. The only way is to find a circle that no one else has entered and research the edges of it going right through to the internals of it. It is possible to find circles without a mark on them including greening crop. Its just perfectly bent over and twisted around but it isn't broken. Now I'd like to know how you can do this without actually breaking the stem. So the first point is its got to have no mark on it and its got to be laid down flat, absolutely flat to the ground like its been steam rolled.

MW: Could you define what you mean by 'a bend', because I've met people who have defined bends in crops that look more like creases? Are we talking about bends without creasing?

BT: That's what I'm talking about. The important thing is that researchers have to be there first. If someone walks into a crop circle before I arrive then I just have to write it off because I cannot prove anything. Unless you can get to it in the first few hours the evidence is destroyed except for the burning.

MW: This is an additional artefact in a genuine circle?

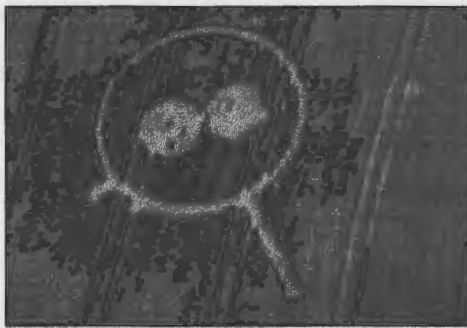

BT: That's right. I think that moisture is drawn up from the ground and steamed out of it. Its done very quickly, sixteen seconds at the most. When a true circle is made it moves down in one movement not a series of circular steps. Even if its a hundred and fifty feet across every stem will hit the ground at the same time. Everything moves instantaneously.

MW: How do you know that?

BT: Well if you see the ones that Doug and Dave make they have a tendency to wander around a little bit and its all smashed up. The genuine circle goes down and its not smashed up and its lined up perfectly. Each stalk is aligned side by side. When you get that you have to ask yourself 'well how did that happen'? You also get the avenues where sometimes is filed out from the main circle in a straight line and then it stops but it doesn't go into the main crop, the heads come down at the base of the crops still standing. Where did the rest of the crop go? There's fourteen inches of crop somewhere. We find that its interlaced with the stalks in the circle but going in the opposite direction. In other words they fold into each other perfectly.

MW: Like fingers being interlaced?

BT: That's right. Then you think you know how its done until another one comes along that's perfect but appears to have been done in a different way. If its been put down with a piece of wood then its got to be done in the same way and it would damage it. I can't explain the nine inch circles that are out in the middle of nowhere. There's lots more of them out there than people think. I kept quiet about it because I wanted to get the television people out there and confront them with it. When I put this to them they didn't know anything about them. And as regards the 'ice circles' they cannot be counted as crop circles.

MW: Where do ice circles appear?

BT: Russia, Sweden, Canada, Norway. The publicity seekers do not accept that there is a connection between the two. Why not put them together? There must be a heat exchange, the ice is gone. And your talking about a few tonnes of ice, a two hundred foot diameter circle with a two metre ring in it and the ice is eighteen inches thick. All we're left with is clean water. Of course the skeptics say 'you can do that with a chain-saw'. By the time you've finished the other end will be frozen. In the photographs nothing has frozen again, there's no ice just a clean piece of water. So where did all that ice go?

MW: Assuming that genuine circles have been investigated by scientists, what else have they found besides the patterning? Any other evidence like chemical residues?

BT: In 1985 I found this jelly like substance which was a brilliant white material on the ground which underneath was slightly blue with speckles in it. Over a period of a week it didn't change in colour but was affected by the rain. In examining the substance I didn't touch it but I did smell it. Within twelve hours I had one of the worst colds I've ever had. A reporter there at the time also sniffed it and he came down with a terrible head cold. The same thing happened to a third person.

MW: How big was this substance?

BT: It was possibly about three metres long, eighteen inches wide and an inch and a half thick. It wasn't any form of animal droppings or anything like that. This was brilliant white like a minimalist type colour in broad daylight but it wasn't luminous at night because I went back at night to check it.

MW: But you only found it at that particular location?

BT: Yes. But the other things we found were the broken stems, and the twisted stems, and the magnetic material that we found over at the White Horse near Beck Hampton. We sent some soil samples to America to be tested. About a week later we had an urgent phone call asking us to go back and take magnets. I put one in the centre of the circle and was amazed to find that small stones and bits of straw and chalk all stuck to the magnet. All the circles we had studied before that had not shown any magnetic effect on compasses, we had not thought of taking in a magnet to see what we could find. We picked up all these bits and sent them off to America. It transpired that we seemed to be picking up some form of space dust or iron dust, because it had been put through a lot of heat. We kept quiet about this of course, for several months, and nobody on the hoaxers side or the publicity seekers side said a word. But the day that report came out, they said 'that all we did was throw iron filings into it'. But they never mentioned anything about the heated iron filings. So it seems to me that once you give them a bit of information then they distort the facts. Anyone can screw up an experiment but what is the point unless you are frightened of something? Skeptics don't research the subject they just destroy another persons work.

MW: How were the particles you had analysed, different?

BT: They seemed to be little beads of molten metal with blow holes in them. This is the sort of damage that meteorites suffer on their way through the atmosphere. You have to have extreme heat. The nickel seems to be taken out. How did this material come to be in the centre of a crop circle. The farmer that found it said the centre of the circle had a layer of grey dust. Why didn't the first communiqué from the publicity seekers say that this is what they had done and what they had done in particular. They just said that they had thrown iron filings in the centre. What they should have said is that they superheated it until it formed tiny globules. My answer is that all researchers should research things more thoroughly and find out things to challenge the publicity seekers. The AIDAS report we had, showed that there was quite a difference in nitrogen levels inside and outside of a circle.

MW: Some circle makers say that when you press the crops down then there is a heat difference and water difference in the crops and the chemical balance will be different.

BT: This is exactly right, which is why I have said that you also have to take samples from undamaged fields, simply because you will have a heat trap.

MW: There is a difference between the chemical effects in a hoaxed circle and a genuine one.

BT: That's what we've got to prove. That's the proof of the pudding. I still say that not enough has been done to research this particular point. It may take a few years to get that routine right. I've been told that this year there will be a new team of people coming across to hoax circles. To me it's crazy what they should do is go down to a damaged field and take samples. We had a hoaxing competition a few years ago where people were paid to play the game. The competition proved that people could replicate crop circles to a pretty high standard. But they were working on information that we had given them. Nobody came up with any new ideas. They can't explain why crop circles are all over the world, they're not just here in Britain. Not forgetting ice circles and tree circles.

MW: You haven't told us about trees. What is this?

BT: In 1984 there was a tree circle in Canada which came to our attention from a news clipping service which just had a short piece from Canada. A forest ranger who was on regular inspection duties came across a circle in forty foot pine trees. The trees were locked together and bent over, eighteen inches above the ground. These trees were twelve inches in diameter and most were bent over. Unfortunately, there are no photographs to prove the point. We only learned about it in 1988. After this was printed in our local paper, a local farmer came forward to say that he had found something similar in local woods. We went along to investigate. What we found was a half circle, the other half had grown back up. We took photographs and video footage of that. Every time I am out flying I now look for these in the woods that we fly over.

MW: So you're still looking for conclusive proof on this?

BT: That's right. We've got trees, corn, grass circles any type of vegetation that's up to three feet high. Most seem to occur in corn. But if you wanted to attract somebody's attention, the first thing you would do is to put a message into a man made environment. In the summer we have masses of fields which act as a great big drawing board with lines in it.

MW: Forming a grid pattern?

BT: Yes, and their using it. The interesting thing is that a lot of these circles match the topography. Once the field has been cut we have found that some are precisely placed between the edges of the field with an accuracy within a few inches. If these are done randomly then how does this happen? It may be a fence line on one side and a road on the other.

MW: Would it be logical for people to measure the position so precisely? Wouldn't they place them more randomly? Why this precise placement?

BT: From above they would be able to place it precisely where they wanted. For any one on the ground it would be much more difficult to measure and they would leave marks. How would they do that? If all crops were sprayed from the air or organically grown then there would be no tram lines, and therefore no way for hoaxers to get into fields undetected.

MW: Why do you think it is crops that a particularly used for making circles, If a force was coming from a craft above then surely they would demonstrate it in as many ways as they could?

BT: The only way you could notice this is in a subject that will leave a mark. We had it in hay, corn, straw, long grass before its cut. The trouble is that grass is mostly cut for silage these days, and its cut at a very short stage. And they don't do too much hay making these days. But there's so much corn it's easier to use and its country wide. What other media are there? We've heard of sand circles in deserts.

MW: Have you experienced any UFO phenomena that has been connected with crop circles? How much evidence is there to show a connection?

BT: I myself have never seen anything in connection with UFOs. What I have had is camera malfunctions and mysterious objects appearing on film which I can't explain. While we were filming the tree circle in 1988, there was a bright object way up moving very slowly turning over and over. I've seen a similar thing on a film from Russia in 1992. We think that's a connection to tree circles and crop circles. In 1988 I saw the biggest UFO that I've ever seen Which crossed the A303, but that was in December of 1988, not in the crop circle season.

MW: The point I was trying to get to was that if someone spots a crop circle and then a UFO, does that imply that the circle was made by the UFO?

BT: No. I will not accept that. I will only accept this if the UFO is hovering above the subject. Only when someone can show me a photograph or video of that happening will I accept that one hundred percent. At the moment my hypothesis is that it is done by a UFO, but I'm still waiting for that evidence.

MW: It's not the sort of thing that the man in the street would be able to replicate, but what about the military? Do you think there may be secret developments which may be responsible?

BT: We all know that the Military must be developing secret technology that is ahead of current technology.

MW: If the military had a secret weapon that happened to make such patterns in corn fields then they wouldn't want to operate it in such a way that would arouse public interest.

BT: If you new all along that UFOs exist, and the time is fast approaching when you would have to let the public know, what other way could you do it? You could start replicating marks in the ground which UFOs have left and drawing attention to them. Getting people involved and giving lectures, doing programs on television. Its exactly what you would do. You would also strenuously deny it at the time. Any excuse would do. First it was whirlwinds, then it was helicopters flying upside down, and then it was two gentlemen doing it as well. After we've gone through all that, the only thing that's left is the UFO phenomena. Eventually it will be announced that UFOs have existed all this time. Religion will go out of the window, governments will have a hard time, people will loose faith in them. Many people will commit suicide, its going to be a hard time.

MW: What about mind control and subliminal messaging?

BT: Everyone should have the means to check this out, particularly with television. I really believe that there are subliminal messages being put through the television. Once when I was playing back a video of a program I had recorded when the video seemed to go out of sync, and I saw images which didn't appear when the video played properly. When I tried to replicate the problem I couldn't do it. Many years ago in this area we had a message come through on our televisions which wiped everything else out. It was from someone who had an Arabic like name who claimed he was from another planet. He said he was here to put the record straight. He ended by saying 'They are onto me now and I must go, I am leaving you now'.

MW: What a lot of people don't know about that is that those transmissions have happened in a lot of other places, not just here. Apparently they happened all over the world and the news hasn't got out that it actually happened.

BT: The moral was about the evils of money. Eventually the message faded out and the normal signal came back. My father who was an electronics engineer said that it had to be a powerful transmitter to knock that out.

MW: It has recently been reported that minds can be controlled not just with words but with symbols. Earlier you were talking about pictures and symbols acting as keys to unlock telepathic abilities that are laying dormant. Has any work been done to decipher the messages of the circles, or do any of these symbols affect peoples ability to use telepathy and mental powers?

BT: I don't know. Quite honestly I don't know. There are lots of experiments going on in that particular area by particular individuals.

MW: Many different researchers have their own opinion about what the message is. Some of these opinions conflict. If there is a genuine message that no one has managed to decode yet, what would that message be? And if it is extraterrestrial, what are they trying to tell us? And if its from a terrestrial source such as the military, then what would they be telling us?

BT: Until we actually find out what's behind this then its terribly difficult to say. It could upset the human race to such a degree that many fanatical people and deeply religious people could become unstable. It could cause great conflict of interest between people. That's what I think has got to change. We have to accept everyone as equals. All over the world we're all the same. We all came from one source originally. Perhaps we're all being drawn back to the past.

MW: Why do you think its happening now?

BT: It's time for a change.

MW: While crop circles have been recorded all over the world, they seem to be concentrated in the Wiltshire / Hampshire area. Why do you think that is?

BT: This area is an archaeological dream. This particular area is one of the most ancient parts of the world. It has had human beings on it for thousands and thousands of years. There's so much pre-history here. That could be the reason why it happens a lot here. If you are being controlled by somebody, the human race has a habit of kicking back. When you can't take it anymore you have a tendency to move on. When there weren't many people in the world then that was easy. But maybe they were being controlled by extra terrestrials. Maybe the Earth has always been controlled.

MW: What about the so called 'missing link' and the end of the dinosaurs?

BT: Research from America seems to be suggesting that many dinosaur species lived in social groups like families. Even that females in some species developed highly maternal instincts. Eventually there was some kind of environmental disaster which wiped them out in a very short time. Maybe extra terrestrials were involved in the development of the mammals.

MW: They may have been developing elsewhere in the solar system. For example the Moon or Mars?

BT: There are some things on the moon which we don't seem to be able to explain. It is my belief that extra terrestrials have been in control of the Earth for many years but left us to our own devices when we reaches a certain stage.

MW: I personally subscribe to a similar view. Do you think that officialdom may have also come up with a similar view? Do you think there's a cover up, possibly including crop circles as well?

BT: The word 'cover up' conjures up all sorts of problems. What I'm saying is that they would withhold the truth for all sorts of political reasons. If the Church told the truth then it would loose its grip on society. It also owns a lot of land throughout the world. Once their society crumbles then government becomes unstable. Once this happens then we have anarchy. So is it a good thing that they are doing to maintain stability, or is it a bad thing?

MW: Some people suggest that the fears of people rioting and going crazy because of earth shattering revelations is misplaced? Do you think that there's any evidence of these things happening?

BT: In the 1960s the American government passed an act which allows them to close all the banks in America and seize all assets.

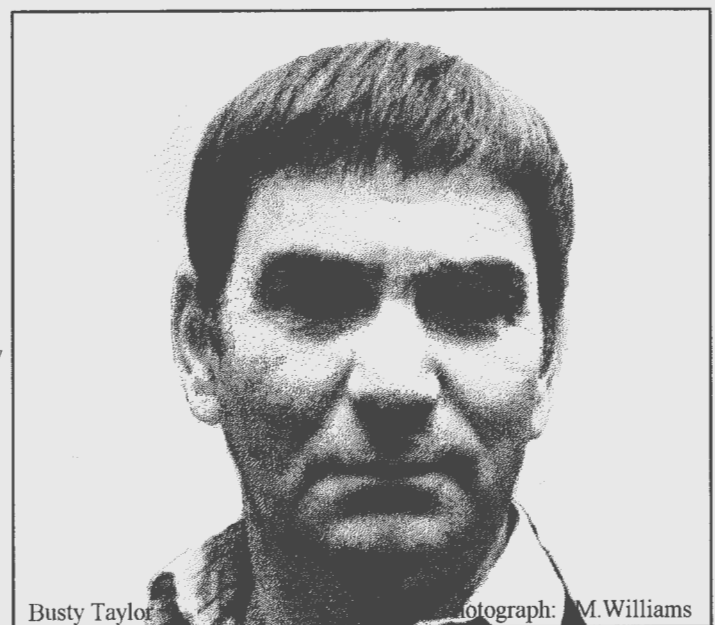

MW: There is a similar thing in the UK under war plans, where in a state of emergency everything which is privately owned becomes property of the state, including people.

BT: They apparently carried out an experiment in New York, where all the banks in Manhattan were closed down, to see how people would react. I've recently been told about a secret base in America which has giant hangers storing millions of pairs of handcuffs. Why?

MW: Finally, do you think that the governments know a lot more about crop circles than they are telling us?

BT: They most probably know what's causing it and where it's leading to. They have to deny it of course. If they didn't it would lead to immense problems. We haven't experienced anarchy for a long time, but look at the horror and damage that riots have caused in the recent years. Imagine what would happen if the millions of unemployed suddenly rose up. Where would it get us? The state would have to have more powers to restrict us. Things would only get worse.

Remote Viewing "On Tap"

WHAT IS CONTROLLED REMOTE VIEWING?

- ♦ Controlled remote viewing is the structured, scientific use of natural human potential for the acquisition of no-nonsense, real-world information without being dependent on
  - ♦ The normal five senses
  - ♦ Help or information from other people
  - ♦ Logical deductions
  - ♦ "Equipment" such as photographs, electronics or other devices (in remote viewing, the person is the equipment)
- Controlled remote viewing provides the acquisition of information when there are no other methods for doing so.

Controlled Remote Viewing (CRV) began in the late 1970's when a natural psychic, Ingo Swann, and several other members of the American Society for Parapsychological Research (ASPR) decided to solve one of the oldest and hardest problems of psychic functioning: the fact that it is neither controllable, reliable, nor repeatable on command.

The problem is not that a person cannot be psychic. The problem is that the perceptual information is buried deeply in the mind, and often gets lost in the process of "bringing it out". In fact, the more one tries to bring it out, the more the process gets in the way, and the less gets out. What to do?

The then fields of psychology, physiology, and the then newly emerging fields of psychophysiology, and other mind/body fields had already developed methods for enhancing awareness of what goes on in the subconscious mind. Indeed, this is one of the major purposes of Ingo Swann psychology.

It was actually the newly emerging field of psychophysiology which rendered the key to the solution. When there is a thought, feeling, or emotion, no matter how deeply buried, it appears to have some physical counterpart. This is the one basis upon which the whole study of "body language" has been built.

The physical reactions range from the broader, more overt expressions, such as smiling when one is happy and frowning when one is sad. More subtle still are the "autonomic reactions", which are controlled by the body's autonomic nervous system. These are such things as blushing when you are embarrassed, your heart beating faster when you are excited, etc. Beyond this level, there are much more subtle reactions.

More recently, it has been discovered by the psycho physiologists that people even store some memories in parts of their bodies, rather than in their minds. Message therapists have long known that when there is a mental or emotional problem, certain muscles react by tightening, aching, or by refusing to perform their normal activities. They have also often seen that massaging, say, a person's shoulder will not only bring out the surface reaction of smiling with relief, and the autonomic reaction of muscle relaxation, but can also often bring visual or auditory images to that person's mind - memories long forgotten.

APPLICATIONS FOR REMOTE VIEWING:

A Controlled Remote Viewer can access and describe places and events so inaccessible or so hostile that no other form of data collection is possible.

A Controlled Remote Viewer can provide an eye witness account to a event (crime, one-time event, or short-lived phenomena) for which there were no witnesses. The tasked person, place, or event may be hundreds of miles distant, or years into the past or future.

He/she can see into the human body to aid in a medical diagnosis.

He/she can perceive meanings, origins and implications beyond the obvious. A Controlled Remote Viewer is thereby a valuable tool for greater and more accurate development of concepts, plans, and long-range ventures, both in established functions, such as critical path analysis, and more esoteric functions, such as public relations and R&D.

A Controlled Remote Viewer can peer below the surface of the earth or sea to aid in the search for the location of otherwise hidden and undetectable things. Controlled Remote Viewers have proven themselves valuable in the search for archaeological artefacts, sunken ships, oil, water, and other natural resources.

In the most extreme example, a Controlled Remote Viewer can enter a guarded building, pass beyond bolted doors, and search locked file cabinets to read papers no one is supposed to see... all without tripping alarms, being spotted by guards or dogs, or being featured on closed-circuit TV. The viewer can then report back without leaving a single trace that security has been compromised in any way. (NOTE: although remote viewing has been used for industrial and other forms of espionage it is not PSI's policy to get involved in such ventures.)

A Controlled Remote Viewer can look beyond the obvious to identify the real problems and their causes, predict the best solutions from among the many available, and define innovative paths for future advancement. Where other methods conflict and fail, a Controlled Remote Viewer can help find the truth.

Projections of impact and receptiveness to social / economic / public relations planning. Reduction of unforeseen "surprise" elements to provide optimal success in future planning. "Best path" projections for business or personal development.

Controlled Remote Viewing (CRV) is a controlled set of physical/mental protocols which allow a person to bring something which lies hidden within the subconscious mind to the surface, and objectify it. The protocols not only take care of the processes of finding the hidden thoughts /emotions /etc., and bringing them to the surface, but also the process of keeping them "clean" of pollution from the imagination, and from emotions, desires, fears, and other contaminants which lie closer to the surface of a person's conscious awareness, and which would tend to "colour" them incorrectly.

HOW DOES CRV RELATE TO BEING "PSYCHIC"?

CRV is a set of psychological and psychophysical protocols designed to allow a structured method for bringing information from the subconscious mind to conscious awareness. The protocols also provide methods for preventing contamination of those perceptions/emotions/feelings/etc. by the conscious-level memories, fears, desires, imagination, and logical thought.

CRV relates to "being psychic" only in that it provides an excellent methodology for getting "psychic" information from the subconscious to the conscious, where it can be objectified, either verbally or in writing.

The fact that the protocols are designed to prevent contamination of thought make CRV training ideal for consultants, psychotherapists, interviewers, and psychiatrists to keep their interviewing pure of personal contamination. There is presently a furore in the psychiatric community about a doctor's ability to - even unintentionally - plant "false memories" into the mind of a susceptible patient. The suspicions, desires, belief systems, or fears of the doctor find their way into the interview process, and the susceptible patient, on an unconscious level, accepts the doctor's "STRAY CATs" as a part of him/her own mental condition. The tendency is very subtle, and there are presently no FIRMLY STANDARDISED methodologies set up to prevent the doctor/patient relationship from creating false memory syndrome (FMS).

Although the protocols of CRV are useful for many other such human endeavours, it is in the area of psychic performance where it has gained its widest acceptance. CRV allows a person to "cue" him/herself, or to be "cued" by someone else, for information which could only be gained through psychic means. For example, a CRV task which is given to a viewer rarely ever contains information about the target. You might task a regular psychic with, "What will my chances be of getting the job?". Not so with a CRVer. You would task that question to a CRVer by writing it on a sheet of paper as a question, giving that question a specific number, say, "95121201", and then asking the CRVer, "What is the answer to question number 95121201?" The CRVer is forced to answer on a purely psychic level. Any information other than that starts the viewer's imagination, emotions, etc., and produces "STRAY CATs" which can totally ruin a CRV session.

So the CRV process is NOT THE SAME AS BEING PSYCHIC. The relationship of CRV to "being psychic" is that the CRV process and protocols allow a trained person to access that part of his/her mind which IS psychic, and to do so on a dependable, repeatable basis.

HOW DOES CRV RELATE TO OUT OF BODY EXPERIENCES?

I've had OOBES and I've wondered if it is the same thing?

No. I attended the Monroe Institute Gateway course the summer before I first started learning CRV. I had an OOBIE there, and can tell you from experience that they are totally different. There is a phenomenon which occurs for very advanced CRVers called "Perfect Site Integration" (PSI)*. You are working on your session, writing down your perceptions, and you look up from the table to find yourself actually at the site. You can see, hear, smell, taste, etc. just as though you were actually there. It is absolutely amazing. Even that, though, is not the same as an OOBIE. In an OOBIE, your mind separates from your body and actually goes to the site. The problem is that in OOBIE, there is a lot of misinterpretation of what's there, simply for one reason: your mind is there, but your brain is back at home. (OOBIEs and ghosts are indicators that there actually is a mind/brain dichotomy.)

Remember that CRV is simply a process whereby you are able to bring impressions from your subconscious mind to the conscious. In CRV, your conscious mind stays in the body (with brain intact), and you begin a structured process whereby the brain begins to accept the perceptions which the subconscious is picking up from the site as input from its normal senses, thereby allowing you to become aware of them. Hence, you sit in the CRV room and perceive smells, colours, etc., as though they were in some way real. However, throughout the CRV process, you normally maintain the awareness that they are only "virtually real". When the phenomenon of Perfect Site Integration happens, your BRAIN has come to the point where it is so accepting of those perceptions that it forgets about the real input from your normal senses. It buys into the alternate reality and begins to perceive it as the only reality. As a result, both the mind and the brain perceive the site. The clarity is phenomenal.

The first time this happened to me was during a practice session -and I was totally unprepared for it to happen. The monitor asked me something, and I looked up at him. Suddenly, the monitor, the room around me, the table where I was sitting, and everything I knew to be my surroundings were gone, and I found myself standing in a very cold, uninhabited place with a sharp bite to the thin air. I looked out and saw an expanse of rocky sand with the sun low to the horizon and the sky much darker than it should have been. There was something large behind me - a stone structure of some kind that I could see out of the corner of my eye. I was just turning to see what it was when the realisation struck me that this was crazy. I wasn't supposed to be here. The shock of the realisation snapped me out of it, and I turned my head back forward to see the monitor (who had seen this sort of thing before) chuckling at me from across the table. Although I hadn't known it at the time, the target site was the pyramids on Mars. To this day, every time I see a picture of the Martian landscape, I get the feeling, "Been there - done it."

Ingo Swann calls this "bi-location", but that has since been denigrated by others to mean nothing more than the process of perceiving a site separate from your own location. You will hear others speak of "bi-location" as the method by which CRV works. While it does give a name to the process, it still doesn't explain how it works. It does, however, indicate to me that the may have never had the experience of TOTAL "bi-location", which is what I have started calling "Perfect Site Integration" - where you become perfectly attuned to the site. Once you've had that experience, you realise that anything less is just sitting at a table perceiving things.

The interviewees on Nightline said that 15% of the experiences were startling in their exactness but that for the most part the rest of the experiments were not especially helpful - at least not enough for the government to continue with the programs. What kind of success rate do your students achieve? - P.H.

One thing that the media hasn't made clear - mainly because they have a policy of not requiring people to think too hard - is that evaluation of CRV data - in fact, ALL data which comes in for intelligence purposes - is done twice. First, is that data accurate? Second, is it something we care about, no matter how accurate it is?

A lot of CRV data which approaches total accuracy is still stuff that's already known, or not important to the person doing the tasking. Everyone might be amazed at its accuracy, but still be completely underwhelmed at its usefulness. When that happens, even totally exact information doesn't get included in the "startling in its exactness" category. In fact, it gets ignored.

Another thing which has been glossed over, so as to not make people think too much, is that, like anything else, evaluations are made by people. Dr. Edwin C. May says 15% of CRV data is "startling in its exactness". Ed Dames of PsiTech says that 100% of a viewer's work is absolutely "accurate". During my time of working the CRV database, I was asked to turn up numbers for accuracy, reliability, exactness, usefulness, and 10 or 20 other criteria. The figures - according to database numbers - came up different every time, because of the criteria the person was looking for.

At one time, we were to make a presentation of CRV's accuracy to congress, so the director told me to go over all the sessions for the previous 6 months and pull out every REPORTED perception (not every perception in the session transcript, but only those which got into the final reports) and evaluate them according to the feedback on the session's target. First of all, we went through every session and pulled out everything except practice sessions. For one thing, many of the non-practice sessions were still waiting for feedback, and for another thing, the non-practice sessions were classified and could not be presented, should anyone ask for hard-copy evidence of our Dr. Edwin C. May3 figures.

Then, because there had been someone in the office who had, on his own, tasked us with a lot of practice targets for which there was no feedback (unrecorded events in history, emotional profiling of certain people, UFOs, etc.), those target sessions were pulled. We then pulled all those which had been merely for practice in some minor aspect of the CRV structure, so for which no final report was written. The remaining practice sessions were ones for which there was

- 1) a session transcript,
- 2) a session report, and
- 3) a copy of the magazine picture or news article which had been the target of the session.

We then painstakingly went through every word of the summary reports and evaluated them very strictly against the feedback picture or article, with 3 categories: correct, incorrect, or "can't tell from the feedback". We threw out all of the "can't tells" and came up with a "score" on what was left. Of the impressions which 1) were included in the FINAL reports of the sessions and 2) could be judged from the feedback, we had a 72% correct accuracy rate. The director looked at the results, which had taken us over 2 weeks to compile, and said that he didn't want to report anything that high to Congress, because they would then expect us to always perform at that level, so he ordered me to sit there and randomly change numbers on the spreadsheet until the total line said 24%. That is what got reported to Congress.

Even still, the accuracy rate of 72% was true only for targets for which there was immediate feedback in the form of a picture or written article. To state that it implied the same accuracy rate for "real world" targets, some of which would never have feedback, and some of which were in future time, and some of which were only targeted "what if" suppositions, etc., would be foolish and unscientific.

And that is only considering the numbers devised using THAT judging criteria. Dr. Ed May uses another set of judging criteria, altogether. In fact, his group, the Cognitive Sciences Laboratory, uses three. In one, he has a viewer do a session on a picture-feedback target, then takes the session transcript or report and shows it to several people. Along with it, he shows them five pictures, and has them pick out which picture is the target, judging by the viewer's description. CHANCE rate of any one impartial judge picking the correct picture is 20%.

A viewer's ability rating is then judged not by the accuracy of any set of impressions, but by percentage above or below 20%. Am I saying that this is a bad rating method? Absolutely not. It is a VERY GOOD viewing method, and scientific in its approach. I am just saying that it measures CRV using a different yardstick than my rating system, than SRI's rating system, than Ingo Swann's rating system, etc. It is especially very much different from the Intelligence community's rating system, where "accuracy" is not nearly as much a consideration as usefulness. Each rating system will report that they are rating CRV's "accuracy", "reliability", etc., and each will turn up a completely different set of numbers. In fact, the three different methods used by the CSL, all Dr. Ed May's of which are scientifically valid, will turn up different accuracy ratings for the same set of sessions. In short summary, until you find out what's behind the numbers, they don't mean a thing.

My method of "scoring" is database-oriented and probably unnecessarily complex. But to answer your question—if I oversimplify it as grossly I oversimplified Dr. May's, my students normally have an INDIVIDUAL AVERAGE PURITY score of between 70%-95% "accuracy" on a consistent basis, depending on the individual student. The OVERALL AVERAGE of all the students is running slightly over 80%.

\ - Certain paths of personal logic have led Mr. Dames to that conclusion rather than hard data analytic means. For a more complete understanding of his scoring, the reader would have to contact him, personally.*

LEARNING CRV

In 12 years of performing CRV for psychic work, and 10 years of teaching it, I have not found anyone who cannot learn it, and perform "psychically" as well as, usually better than the best "psychics" I have met. The protocols are simple, yet their use can become very subtle and complex with certain targets and in certain situations.

There are, however, two types of people who normally make poor students of the process: The person who fears anything or different or believes that anything out of the ordinary is "of the devil". This is a self-solving problem, because that kind of person doesn't usually want to be a student of the process, anyway.

The person who has been practising psychic work for years, has settled comfortably into his/her own methods, and is very satisfied with his/her results. This type of person often wants to take the training in order to further enhance his/her abilities and to improve results. However, the CRV methodology is rarely as comfortable to them as the old ways, and even the process of learning the protocols is very disturbing. For one reason, they have to unlearn bad habits along with learning good ones. In the end, these people usually abandon the CRV process, watch their results go back to their past lower level, and are now worse off than before, knowing that they could do better, but just don't want to. I usually counsel people who are long-practising psychics with the old advice, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

HUDSON VALLEY UFO ENCOUNTERS

This abduction in the Hudson Valley area of New York, is unique in that it describes the use, by the aliens, of a force field in the home, along with a special hand held tool that gives off a green light, which enables them to open up the field and pass through. It also contains a description of a classic case of a nose implant, and also the involvement of members of a family.

By. Philip J. Imbrogno

Over the past five years the New York, New Jersey and Connecticut area have been the scene of a massive number of UFO sightings. The numbers of reports are so great that I believe this area has the highest number of raw UFO sighting reports in the entire world. These reports are documented in my book Night Siege The Hudson Valley Ufo Sights which I co-authored with the late Dr. J. Allen Hynek and Mr. Bob Pratt.

I have been asked over the years by many UFO researchers if there have been any close encounter-abduction type cases in the Hudson Valley. My answer to most was no. Only to few did I admit that there were abduction cases and plenty of them. This denial of such cases was at the request of Dr. Hynek since he wanted Night Siege to be a documentation of the many UFO reports in the Hudson Valley. D. Hynek also wanted to keep these cases quiet until we had more data about the sightings in the area.

Encounters TV Movie

With so many reports over the years and with the sighting still continuing it was only a matter of time before the growing number of Abduction cases in the Hudson Valley had to be dealt with.

To this date I have been contacted by at least 75 people who feel as if they had more than a sighting. Of the 75 there are 25 that would be suitable for further study. Of these twenty five ten come from professional backgrounds. All do not want any type of publicity. I will explore two of these cases in this article. At the witnesses request, I have changed their names to protect them. I would also like to inform the reader that Whitley Strieber, author of the best selling book Communion experiences took place in the Hudson Valley area. Since the publication of his book many people have come forward with incredible stories, people who would otherwise would have kept silent.

On July 2 1987 I received a call from a 36 year old woman from Toms River New Jersey who I shall call Gail. Gail was very troubled on the phone and insisted that she talk to me about a UFO related experience that she had. During the last part of June (1987) as she was lying down on her bed, she felt some what uneasy as if someone was watching her. The time was Ten PM. She then heard a voice say "We have come for you.. You will not be hurt." She then realised that her entire body was paralysed and that she could only move her eyes. Gail was lying on her back and noticed that three beings stood in the doorway to her bedroom. She was alone in the house at the time, but does live there with her seventeen year old daughter who was away visiting her father in Croton Falls N.Y. Gail is divorced.

Three beings were dressed in something that looked like tightly fitting jump-suits and stood in a single row, one behind the other. The light in the hall was dim, and she could not see their features. She noticed they were about five feet tall with very long arms. The leader, according to Gail seemed to have a problem getting into the room. It was as if some type of invisible shield was blocking his way. He lifted up his hand and pressed them against the invisible shield.

The leader then took some type of rod out from a side pocket and turned the bottom of it. The rod then glowed with a green light and he passed it over the doorway area. They then walked into the room without any effort. As they entered the room still in a single file she noticed that they had large heads and eyes that looked like a cats which wrapped around their heads. She never heard them talk but heard all kinds on buzzing noises in her head when the leader communicated with the others.

Gail tried to scream but could not, she could only move her eyes. The leader placed himself on her right side and then one of them went to the foot of the bed and the other on the left side of the bed. The beings on each side of her then placed their hands under her head and raised it up. She then noticed that the one on her left took a tube of what like a narrow roll of white cotton and started pushing it up her left nostril. At that moment she felt extreme pain in her head and then started to lose consciousness. She felt as if she was falling from a great height, then she does not remember anymore.

The next thing she recalls is waking up at 8am with a very bad headache. As she walked to the bathroom her nose (both nostrils started to bleed. She felt as if something was stuck up her nose, but nothing was there. She looked in the bathroom mirror and noticed her nose was swollen and puffy. She noticed a rash on her neck, legs and slightly on her arms.

She had hoped that the experience from that last night was a dream and tried to block it out of her head. When her daughter arrived home that night she told her about what happened. Gail told me that before she even finished with her story her daughter started shaking and then told her that on the same night, about the same time she and her father were followed by a UFO on route 116 near Croton Falls New York. She described to her mother a large dark craft triangular in shape that paced the car for five minutes above tree top level.

I found this report very interesting since Croton falls is near the border of Westchester and Putnam Counties in New York and that lonely route has been the site of more than one Close Encounter over the past five years. I also found it interesting that both mother and daughter had a experience with the paranormal at the same time.

There is more to this case than meets the eye. The daughter and father according to my findings may have had as much as thirty minutes missing time. If this is so and if both were abducted then the experience happened to father, mother and daughter at the same time!

Gail's rash and headaches continued for a few days then disappeared. I plan to have Gail undergo hypnosis in the near future by a certified psychologist. The story does not end here. Several weeks latter I received a call from Gail telling me that it happened again. She said "Those creatures came back the same time and they did the same thing". She continued: "It was as if I was watching a movie of the first time they came, they did exactly the same thing. Including having trouble getting into the doorway to the bedroom. My daughter was once again away visiting her father."

This case is still under study, but initial findings indicate that both Gail and her daughter may have a history of interactions with the intelligence behind the UFO phenomenon. (This document is continued, with another case, in ABDUCT2.UFO) [Editors note: This abduction describes the use of an instrument to find what is presumably an implant. Its use right on the subjects head, suggests they might need to be that close to detect it. The aliens say they come from a place that is ugly compared to Earth, and that they would like to live here but can't. They say they will see the abudctee again. They also reveal that they know that our government will attempt to keep the UFOs secret. A UFO hotline number 1(914)739-6830is given, which is still in operation as of 9/4/88, with an answering machine to receive reports; and also a PO Box number for Phil Imbrogno.]

The second case I would like to cover took place on July 19th 1984 during the peak of activity in the Hudson Valley. the sighting involved a Close Encounter, Missing time and abduction. If this was a real experience then the implications are fantastic. In all the cases that I chose to study all the witnesses related the truth, or what they thought was the truth. There is no doubt in my mind that their stories are not hoaxes since none would have nothing to gain by going public with their experiences.

Bill (as we shall refer to him) is a thirty two year old computer programmer guys from Stormville flying those planes faking a UFO" He then drove on listening to his radio.

He then turned off the route 52 exit near Stormville New York and began travelling north. The time now was close to eleven PM and the roads were quite desolate. He came to a clearing where there was a large field and noticed a large dark mass sitting in the field about 200 yards from the road. At first he thought that it was a new home, but then he knew there was no house there since he went this way just last night and the field was empty. As a matter of fact Bill drove this way home and passed the field every night and never saw a house there.

Bill slowed down the car "This thing was huge and dark", he said. The strange thing was it was almost the same shape as a big barn, but it seemed more tapered toward the sides and very smooth. As he watched, the dark object rose into the air without a sound. This really upset Bill since he was the only car on the road. The object then rose higher and higher. All that Bill could see was the dark mass slowly rising into the air. It was now about twice as high as the trees and it moved slowly towards Bill who was still in the car. Bills radio then started to sound "funny" he said that the music on the radio sounded like a tape recorder with very low batteries.

Bill put the car into gear and sped away from the object. His heart was racing as he drove up the road at about fifty miles and hour. Bill then lost sight of the object and for a major scientific-engineering corporation that helped design the major components for the new NASA Hubble space telescope. On July 19th 1984, at about ten-thirty PM, Bill was leaving work and heading west on Highway I-84. As he approached the Taconic Parkway ramp in Dutchess county New York he noticed a very bright almost circular object off to the north. The object seemed to be just sitting there in the sky and the lights were very bright white. As he watched the object it began to move and it was at that time he noticed a dark mass behind it which blocked out the brighter light-polluted night sky. He continued to drive on 84 and soon lost sight of the object. He then brushed the entire incident off his mind and thought, "Oh it must have been those continued to drive at a slower rate of speed. After several minutes he notice d a glow up ahead over a hill. As he approached the crest of the hill there the object was! It was about 300 feet above the trees and was all lit up with rows of white and yellow lights. He then stopped his car and turned off the engine and the lights. He was hoping that who ever was in the thing would not see him. The object then turned off its lights and he could see this huge dark mass slowly drifting toward him. The object passed right over his car, he could now see its shape, it was triangular. Bill told me, "I don't want to make light of this, but the ship looked like one of the destroyers in Star Wars" The underside was the same shape, although I did not see the top.

The object passed over Bill, as he looked up he saw circular areas underneath the UFO. These circular areas seemed to be like tunnels leading into the object. Inside these circular tunnels there was a white flashing, similar to the flashing of a white strobe light (we had several reports of this white flashing effect from past CE cases in the Hudson Valley, also the circular areas have been reported numerous times before). Bill told me there was no sound. He estimated its size to be at least 300 feet from end to end.

Then something strange took place. The last thing Bill remembers is watching it go over his car, he did not see it leave. The next thing he knows he is at the bottom of the hill 600 feet from the position he was when the UFO passed over his parked car. The object itself was gone. He was not sure what time it was when he watched the object passed over his car, but he feels it was most likely about eleven-thirty PM. The time was now twelve -fifteen. He started his drive home upset and with a very stiff neck.

When he arrived home he told his wife about his sighting. She was worried to begin with since he was almost an hour late. That night Bill woke up yelling in the night "saying get away from me!" His wife said that the nightmares continued for a while at least twice a week. Bill told me that the he was not sure of what the nightmare was, but he knew something was after him. As time went on Bill was afraid to drive at night alone. He even had to insist to his boss not to put him on the evening or night shift at his job. Finally Bill wanted to find out more since the experience of the UFO and the fearful dreams tormented him. It wasn't until 1987 that Bill contacted me and told me his story. Bill had seen Budd Hopkins (author of the book INTRUDERS) on a number of shows and asked me if would be possible for him to be hypnotised. Hearing Budd on TV talk about the abductions made him fearful and he wanted to make sure that this did not happen to him. I arranged to have Bill meet with a certified psychologist that I occasionally use to perform hypnosis. The following is a brief transcript of Bills encounter under hypnosis. He first related seeing the object on 84 and then the object in the field and then in the sky over the hill, it is then that his voice becomes fearful.

Bill" I see it now its that thing! Its coming in my direction!. I am going to turn off my car lights. maybe then wont see me and go away. Its huge.....Oh my God what is it!. There's someone standing in the road he is now walking toward the car. Who are you!..... He's saying something to me "don't be fearful we need you...you have been selected". Selected for what, get away!. I feel strange like I am floating in the air, its all dark. I am now on this table and these guys are all around me, six of them. Two are at my head and two on the sides (two on each side). My legs and arms are like dead weights I can't move them.

Bill is then asked to describe them: "These guys are small, large heads with round eyes, the eyes are all black I can see no pupils in them, they remind me of sharks eyes. They are dressed in some type of black and white skin type suits. I can't see their hands. The one at my head is moving so me type of device that looks like a portable car vacuum cleaner up and down the left side of my head. It vibrates my entire head, it feels like a drill going through my head... STOP! it hurts.. He tells me that they are looking for something and found it.

I now can feel my legs and arms they are allowing me to get up. They are very small only up to the bottom part of my chest (Bill is six foot one inch) The others are now over some type of panel. Two of them are leading me by the arms. I asked them where they were from. The one on my right leading said "We are from here" I didn't understand the answer. I asked him if they planned to let me go. he replied "Yes but we will see you again" He told me that they need us because they have trouble living in our world. He said they come from a place which is very ugly when compared to our world and they would rather live here, but can't. I told him that I would remember and tell every one about this. He said I would remember in time but there are forces in your own(?) which will stop you from telling anyone about this experience." Bill then found himself back in the car. Bill now recalls every aspect of the experience. It was a very real experience to him.

There are about a dozen other cases similar to Bill's and Gail's. In the Hudson Valley area. Can all of these people who have had UFO abductions and sightings in this part of the country be experiencing some type of mass hysteria? I don't think so. The evidence indicates that there is some type of non-human intelligence at work. If the case histories of the total experiences are true then we all better work together to get to the bottom of this.

In 1987 Peter Gersten a Peekskill New York attorney put together a new organisation called CONTACT. Peter who is known for his work in obtaining UFO related documents from government agencies organised CONTACT in response to the great number of Close Encounter cases in the New York area. Peter had some of the top UFOlogist flown in from all over the country to meet at his Peekskill home. Among them were Tracy Torme, Budd Hopkins, Jim McCampbell and this author. On September 27 CONTACT organised a free UFO public conference in Brewster New York. The theme of the conference was to explore the abduction phenomena and the possibility that some people have been in contact with a non-human intelligence. Speakers at the conference included John Keel, Whitley Strieber and Budd Hopkins. Over 900 people attended the 12 hour conference and 200 filled out forms who felt they had a contact experience.

Then during the first several months of 1988 Peter Gersten dissolved CONTACT and as of the date of this publication CONTACT is no longer in existence. The reasons for this are not clear but Peter still maintains a UFO Hotline where callers can get up to date information about UFO sightings. The caller can also leave their name and report their own sighting on a tape. The UFO hotline number is 914-739-6830.

ROSWELL REPURCUSSIONS

By Paul Damon

Paul Damon speaking at a Truthseekers lecture in Bristol in 1994

In light of recent events that have brought about changes in the public awareness of the UFO research field, most prominent being the emergence of the alleged Roswell footage, I feel that it is high time that UFO research groups and independent researchers alike re-evaluate their position within the growing and ever more fashionable UFO movement. I do not think that I would be far off the mark if I said that most researchers are screaming out for more publicity and cooperation where potential research areas are concerned.

ECCENTRIC MADMAN

No longer is the UFO researcher confined to the stereotypical picture of an anorak-clothed, bespectacled and eccentric madman living for clear night skies, a pair of binoculars and a flask of hot coffee. Whether the Roswell footage is genuine or not, the consequential effect of it being aired on many main television channels worldwide has been to raise questions within the mind of the general public - so much so that many people are now making their way into the UFO consciousness. Individuals are contacting research groups, reading UFO books old and new (sales of UFO related books have shot up by over 30% as of October 20th, 1995 in the United States alone) and avidly throwing themselves into their own personal research projects in response to the looming possibilities presented by the Roswell footage enigma.

WHAT CAN ALL THIS MEAN?

I have been repeatedly asked ever since the footage was aired on South American television whether or not I thought it was real. My answer has always been one of indecisiveness. I say that I am not sure, and that I think the only people who know whether it is genuine or not are the people who will never talk about it, high up in government or military positions. I then conclude with a statement that more research must be pumped into the whole UFO field in order to gain some clarity of view. We are talking about an event that allegedly occurred 48 years ago. A grand amount of water has passed underneath the bridge since then. After the demise of the original story with the military statement that the saucer was in fact a weather balloon, interest died until the early eighties when new rumours and alleged leaked stories from the military started to hit the UFO research community. There has been an escalation of interest since that time, along with new facets and thrilling clues and mysteries such as the MJ12 documents and the emergence of witnesses to the events.

EXPERIMENTAL WEAPON

Something did crash into the desert outside of Roswell, New Mexico. If it was a craft from another civilization, or an experimental weapon, or a Russian probe, then someone, somewhere, knows the truth. We, the researchers and general public unfortunately may never know. One thing that we all know is that aside from the Roswell incident, there are many more faces to the UFO mystery. There are many more wonders to the hypothesis of extraterrestrial visitation. As a very ancient Tibetan saying goes "Wonders are many, yet few are they who can understand them..."

Now is the time for organized research groups and independent researchers to really present their collected information and evidence to the general public. The iron must be struck while it's hot. In my mind there are two very important reasons for this. The main reason is to create a safety cushion for the UFO research community, for if the Roswell footage is suddenly proven to be nothing more than an elaborate hoax then the public mustn't be left with a sour taste and a feeling of embarrassment at showing any interest. They must have something else to reinforce their growing interest. If the footage is proved to be a fake, the possibility of UFO research slipping back into the genre of the deluded in the mind of the great public is very great. The second reason is simply to build up the wall of questions. If people want answers, they'll try their hardest to get them, and the quest for truth has never been more important than it is now when so much corruption is apparent in the governments of the world. The world changes from day to day, such as all things change. Hopefully, the Roswell footage, genuine or not can be the catalyst for a new era of UFO Truth Seeking world wide.

FOOTNOTE

While writing the above article, a nagging feeling to look through my archives for references to portraits and statues of strange beings having six fingers on their hands as does the creature in the Roswell footage autopsy persuaded me to spend some time going through my books and papers. I did indeed find some interesting references. As you may read in previous articles I have written, I have a deep interest in the Aborigines of Australia, and their legends of the Dreamtime. The Dreamtime is an epoch long lost in the mists of time where once alien gods walked among the men of the earth. These beings came down from the stars and shaped the lands and the animals that were to be the company of ancient man - which the giants had also created. Eventually some left for the stars, while others went into the earth to act as slumbering guardians promising to return once more in the future to revive the Dreamtime.

This legend, while paralleling many legends from all over the world survives strongly to this day with the living native Aborigines of Australia. In their rock paintings, hand prints hold a special ritualistic significance. Hand shadows as they are called are the signatures of the human souls that live on after the passing of the body and so the hand shadows become part of the "ancestor cult". Among the cave paintings of Garnet Glen, Mann Ranges in Central Australia, there are those which show six fingered hands. These hands are included with the symbols of the Dreamtime - showing in essence that the possessors of the hands walked the earth during the Dreamtime. In Euclolo Creek of Pimba, South Australia there are other symbolic representations of six fingered hands.

Australia is not alone in being graced with this kind of marking. Marcahuasi Plateau is 4000 metres high and can be found in mystical Peru. In 1952, one Dr. Daniel Ruzo discovered a collection of rock sculptures, one of which clearly showed a human figure standing, its head covered by a helmet and six fingers upon each hand. As remarkable as it may sound, this type of rock sculpture with a helmet and six fingers on each hand is not unique, and models of such can be found all over Central and South America, some dating back over a thousand years. Again in Peru, at Cerro Sechin, Casma Valley in the north, there are huge slabs of stone where there are carved similar figures with six fingered hands. And lastly and perhaps most significantly to the largest such illustration in the world, on a steep incline among the massive designs of the drawings of Nazca in Peru can be found a huge figure with... You guessed it, six fingers on each hand. Well, deduce what you will. So much investigative work still waits to be done with the ancient mysteries of the world, and when we can make connections between these mysteries and modern mysteries such as the creature in the Roswell footage, the plot just gets deeper. That is where the story ends, and starts again!!!

Fake Film or Covert Plan?

By Daryl Smith

When the Majestic 12 documents were released to the public, I thought this was it we finally have absolute proof, but this was not to be.

Now we have the alleged alien autopsy footage, and as I step back and look at the picture of events of the last few months I can see a pattern that could almost be called "give them a little take a lot". I hope to show that maybe this is all part of a covert plan of action. I personally feel that there are good points contained in the autopsy footage, mainly the quality of the alien and it's internal organs. This alone is not an obvious fake and would be very costly to produce.

However the so called "Debris" footage is very dubious especially with the wording "VIDEO TV". What worries me about the whole affair is the way in which Ray Santilli and others have continuously lied and embellished the truth. The way that the whole affair was handled is a shambles from start to finish. More than this, The actions of some UFO researchers should be looked at very seriously. I will not mention names, but these researchers have in the past and still are lying, controlling, and deceiving YOU and ME, and we must ask the question to what end?

JIGSAW

We must keep an open mind that there is a possibility the film is genuine, but for me to be convinced I would need better evidence. I would like to see an Investigation not by any one UFO organisation but by a selected group, selected by public poll organised through all the major UFO publications. A few great researchers pulling their resources together could paint a better picture than the jigsaw presented so far.

There has been a lot of stories making the rounds saying that the alien in the film is a human. Come on people wake up and smell the coffee. The main human scenario's are either some kind of military or medical experiment, or a human with Turners disease. A person with this disease does have some appearances of the alien, the large head, no nipples and even six fingers. In the past we all know that the military establishment has hideously experimented on humans, but these explanations leave out one main point, if this is a human where is the belly button. I know of no known human who was not incubated in the womb and not attached by an umbilical cord. Their explanation then is well maybe its a cloned human, but if we are going to let our unconfirmed stories get that wild with talk of cloned people, then what's so wild about it just being a plain old alien. The skeletal structure of the alleged alien is also different. Its not a gigantic evolutionary step from us but, there are subtle differences in the skeletal structure, shape, and size.

One other point to note is, if this is a human then why are the internal organs like none ever seen, I supposed these were also diseased. If this were a real human then you would not put fake organs inside to make it look alien. As we saw in a recent publicised trial THE GLOVE JUST DOESNT FIT.

This leaves just two alternatives :

1. THE FOOTAGE IS REAL
2. THE FOOTAGE IS A SERIES OF SPECIAL EFFECTS.

There is a strong possibility that the latter are the case. I see no part of the autopsy footage that could not be produced today through special effects. Although I do have a problem with the theory of the paint/knife, only drawing a line on the skin instead of cutting it. When the first line or incision is made under the ear travelling down over the chest, there are no drips for several seconds. Now if the knife were just painting a line on the skin you would be able to see an accumulation of ink, of which would form the drips, but there is none. Therefore would it not be wise to suggest that the liquid seep out from under the skin, showing the possibility that REAL SKIN AND A REAL KNIFE. There is no evidence to support the theory that this film is fake all we have are peoples opinions that it can be done.

The only possibility left is that the film is real. Most people feel that this is not possible because of three main points :

1. THE ALIEN LOOKS TOO HUMAN
2. THEY HAVE NEVER HEARD OF AN ALIEN WITH SEXUAL ORGANS
3. THE SIX FINGERS, AND THE SIX TOES ASPECT.

The problem is that we have become so conditioned by media that it is now hard for us to think of aliens being anything but the typical pointy chin grey species of the Communism type.

The reality is different of course, and there are thousands of sightings of Humanoid type beings going back hundreds of years. A little known fact that many people don't know is that six fingered aliens, and aliens with sexual organs have also been reported. A good source of information that published these descriptions and even drawings is a book called "THE MATRIX II" by Vladamar Valerian, and published by Arc-turus books 1990. (Only 500 copies printed.)

For the people who are new to the subject, and those who have forgotten some past cases, I would like to bring their attention to an alleged report known as "THE GRUDGE 13 REPORT" which was allegedly seen by Bill English while working for the U.S. military whilst stationed in Britain. I am not saying that the report Mr English saw refers to the Roswell case or even the film footage but I would like to introduce it as a reference point, so that people can see some similarities to the film reported in the past.

"About midway through the report came a section that dealt specifically with photographs. Each photo was labelled and had appendix to certain reports. A number of photos in there dealt with a recovery program of some type that took place in the south-western part of the united states. They did not give a location name but did give co-ordinates for the area. The photos dealt with the special teams that were called in to recover a crashed UFO. It also dealt with alien bodies and autopsy reports, autopsy type photographs, high quality, colour, 10 x 8, 5 x 7.

Photo number 1 showed an alien being on an autopsy table which is a metal table with runnels and traps underneath to trap fluid and faeces. Body appeared to be a little short of 4 feet. Table was about 7 feet. No clothing on body, no genitalia, bodies completely heterous, head was a rounded cranium, slightly enlarged, eyes almond shaped, slits where nose would be, extremely small mouth, receding chin line, holes where ears would be.

Picture showed beginning stages of autopsy, following standard procedure, body was slit from crotch to just under chin and green viscous liquid was in evidence. There were internal organs but these could not be identified. Photo's after that concerned specific areas of internal organs of what appeared to be a small clusters of multi-valve heart or at least two hearts within the cadaver. No accurate description of autopsy report or what was found within corpse accompanying photos. Indication that there was no stomach or digestive tract per-se. Later analysis showed that fluid within the body was chlorophyll-based liquid which apparently dealt with photosynthesis or a similar process.

One section of the report did specify that the cadavers were extremely odorous, but this could be accounted for by either deterioration or a number of things, but theory was that waste was excreted through pores of the skin. They could only theorise this in the report because of no xenobiology".

As you can see there are some aspects of the film footage that are similar to the Grudge report. The American researcher John Lear managed to question Bill English further and some other interesting points are:

- ◆ At the time of the report 11 alien cadavers were being kept at Wright Patterson air force base.
- ◆ Additional alien cadavers were being stored at 4 to 5 other medical institutions.
- ◆ The report stated that there were 17 DIFFERENT SPECIES accounted for at the time of the report.

This shows that there is a high possibility that the U.S. has a number of different alien cadavers, and that humanoid type aliens could figure in that possibility. If like me you believe these reports, and you come to this conclusion then you must also come to the conclusion that they would have autopsied these aliens. You also would have recorded the autopsy.

Again we are brought back to the autopsy film, I personally feel that there is a good possibility that this film was released to the public as part of an indoctrination campaign. The lack of hard evidence and the bad debris footage acts like the false code on the famous Majestic 12 documents, so as the film can never be proved to be real but also gives the possibility that it might, and at the same time releasing the intended information. Just like the Majestic document I feel only a government shadow group would and could have the money, planning, and balls to pull this off. The alleged cameraman probably doesn't even exists outside a government plan of action. Shadow groups in the past have completed far harder dupe jobs on the public, just remember J.F.K.

We almost take it for granted that the Abduction phenomenon is real and that they take sperm and ova from humans, if this is so then would it not be possible that the hybrids created would look humanoid in appearance, because the abductees seem to think so.

The final reason people will give you for not liking the film is that the alien does not fit the Roswell story. Even this falls flat on its face as we now know that the incident in the film was not the Roswell incident. The timing and placing of the incident does not correspond with what is known about the Roswell case. Therefore why should three aliens look like the Roswell aliens? If one race of aliens is visiting our planet then why not many?

You may then ask why was this film sold to the public as the Roswell story, and the most probable answer for this is money. Roswell is a well established crash retrieval case with a solid base of interest, therefore an ideal situation to make money, if you were to get your hands on any autopsy footage of aliens. The Roswell link is where the footage falls flat, the only link the footage has with the details of this case is in the very basic structure of the case.

Mr Santilli has probably been pulled and played along as much as the rest of us. He probably did not know what he was getting in to, Would you if this film were dropped into your lap? [I think he knew! - ED]

In fact would it not be perfect for him to take all the blame, all the attention away from the real agenda, the real plan of action and stop you from asking the real questions Why would this film be shown to the world? Who would ultimately benefit ?
